Dewey Proposals Halt Big Strike

Valley Workers Will Return to Jobs Monday Including $3,500,000 State Thruway Project

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—A four-day strike against state projects running into the millions of dollars was setled yesterday, forestalling a state-wide construction work stoppage.

The successful peace talks, organized by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, will return some 200 striking workers to their jobs on Monday at nine different locations.

The settlement was announced by New York State Industrial Commissioner Edward Corsi. He said the Dewey parleys had disclosed "an honest difference of opinion as to what actually constitutes construction and maintenance."

The strike involved five Hudson Valley highway projects and building jobs at the Middletown, Hudson River, Harlem Valley and Matteawan State Hospitals—some $10,000,000 in work.

At isue was the charge that state crews were doing road resurfacing work that should be done by members of the AFL Dutchess County Building and Trades Council.

Also involved in the dispute was the charge by President Thomas A. Murray of the State Federation of Labor that mental hospital patients were doing work on the grounds and roads of their institutions.

This work, Murray said, should be done by union labor.

Part of Treatment

But the State Mental Hygiene Department replied that these patients were performing only menial tasks as a part of their treatment.

The dispute is to be aired Monday by a joint state-labor subcommittee at a meeting in Corsi's office.

This promise to hear the protests against the use of state labor on the hospital and highway jobs averted a threatened strike by AFL construction workers throughout the state.

Jobs involved in the strike included a $3,500,000 eight-mile section of the new state Thruway project.

Committees to Talk

Representing labor on the subcommittee meeting Monday with Cori will be Murray and three other AFL officials.

Representing the state will be John Tiesler, of the budget director's office, Henry Cohen of the Department of Public Works, and Deputy Labor Commissioner Edward Nyegaard.

Gov. Dewey's three-man committee which negotiated the settlement with AFL leaders was made up of Corsi, Betram D. Tallamy, state superintendent of public works, and T. Norman Hurd, state budget director.

Skull Fracture Is Cause of Death, Autopsy Reveals

Carl J. Alongi Not Victim of Foul Play, Probe Indicates; Money Angle Checked

An autopsy performed at the request of members of his family disclosed that Carl J. Alongi, 43, of 9 Violet avenue, Poughkeepsie, died from a fracture of the skull suffered when his car struck a tree at Elting's Corners about 4 o'clock Tuesday, Sept. 16. A pathological examination is being made at the State Police laboratory. The autopsy was performed at Poughkeepsie after it had been contended by members of Alongi's family that it was his custom to carry considerable money and none was found on the body.

When the element of robbery entered the picture District Attorney Louis G. Bruhn ordered an autopsy under the direction of Coroner Ernest A. Kelly. The examination was made at the Torsone Memorial Funeral Home morgue. Alongi had been pronounced dead by Dr. Jordan Benzcheff, Vassar Hospital intern.

Was Jewelry Salesman

When it was charged that Alongi frequently had considerable money on his person, state police began an investigation as to where Alongi had been prior to the accident. Alongi was salesman for a Poughkeepsie jewelry concern and also sold window screens. In the car after the accident the police found a considerable amount of jewelry which was returned to the Mill street jewelers.

Investigation by Sergeant L. Baker of the Highland State Police station disclosed that Alongi had visited several taverns in New Paltz Monday night and early Tuesday morning. Proprietors charged that Alongi appeared not to have money and had sought free drinks, state police say. Later he went to the home of a friend where he was invited to remain overnight when, Coroner Kelly said, it was found he was in no condition to drive his car home. State Police report Alongi was given ham and eggs and in return he had presented his friend with a ring he wore. State police later recovered the ring.

While a bed was being prepared for Alongi, state police report, he left the place and drove away, narrowly missing collision with a pole. At Elting's Corners his car struck a tree. Residents report the time about 4 a. m., but the accident was not discovered until about 6 a. m., when John Nickol, driving a newspaper delivery truck, noticed the car.

Report Is Unfounded

Coroner Kelly reported today that there was no evidence of foul play or evidence of robbery and that death was caused by a depressed fracture of the skull. "A report that Alongi had been hit on the head with a bottle is unfounded and the blood found on a blanket in his car came there when the body was covered with the blanket after the accident had been discovered," the coroner said. "Jewelry found in the car has been returned to the firm Alongi represented," he continued, "and state police investigated and found untrue the statement that robbery may have been the motive for an attack on Alongi."

Rail Unions Settle Rift With Central

Cleveland, Sept. 20 (AP)—The New York Central Railroad and three unions have settled a working rules dispute that started more than two years ago.

Details of the agreement involving the Engineers, Firemen and Conductors Brotherhoods were not disclosed when it was announced yesterday.

The 58 grievances in the dispute concerned only the NYC's lines east of Buffalo. A strike had been set for Aug. 11, but was called off when the National Mediation Board summoned both sides to Washington.

A fourth union, the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, also has a grievance dispute with the NYC's lines east of Buffalo. Negotiation sessions on that case will be resumed today.

Heavy Load on Average Family

(AN EDITORIAL)

There was a time when the average man and woman didn't have to do much worrying about the cost of running the government. In that era, it commonly was said the rich paid most of the bill anyhow and the rest of the people got the benefits practically free.

Anyone who still believes that, lives in a world of sheer fantasy. We have finally reached the point where the cost of government is so huge that even the confiscatory taxes paid by people in the high-income groups hardly make a dent in the total. The people of small and moderate means must carry the bulk of the burden.

Besides carrying the direct tax load, the average family is still harder hit by the indirect taxes.

The Empire State Chamber of Commerce, Inc. has compiled an illuminating and startling table on the cost of products and taxes on the products, which is herewith published, in order to show the public that it is not the high cost of the products they buy as much as it is the high cost of taxes.

Business today is the unsalaried tax collector.

Truce Talks Halt Without Progress

52-Minute Session Filled With Arguments on Who Started War

Munsan, Korea, Sept. 20 (AP)—The Korean truce talks adjourned today for the eighth straight week long recess after an angry 52-minute session in which negotiators argued over who started the war.

It was the first plenary meeting since Sept. 12 and produced no headway in the prolonged stalemate on prisoner exchange, major obstacle to a truce.

The Reds agreed to a UN request and recessed the talks at Panmunjom until Sept. 28.

Lt. Gen. William K. Harrison, senior UN delegate, read the Communists a lengthy, blistering statement in answer to their charge that the allies "stand against the people of the whole world." Harrison called it a "lesson in geography."

Says 44 Nations Vote

He bluntly reminded the Reds that 44 nations voted in the UN General Assembly to brand the North Koreans aggressors.

North Korean Gen. Nam Il, the chief Communist delegate, replied that those nations were "voting machines" and satellites of the U. S.

Harrison said this was insult to "the dignity and intelligence of the people of these countries."

Heavy Battles Rage on West, Central Fronts; Planes Hit Foes

Seoul, Korea, Sept. 20 (AP)—Chinese Communist forces today beat back a UN patrol advancing on the crest of Old Baldy Hill and seized another western front hill, as heavy fighting raged in western and central Korea.

The U. S. Eighth Army said counter-attacking UN soldiers at dawn reached within 100 yards of the new Red positions on Old Baldy before being forced back by thunderous artillery and mortar fire.

UN planes hammered the Reds with gasoline, rockets and bombs in support of infantrymen on the slopes of Old Baldy, a battle-scarred knob west of Chorwon.

Estimate 500 Enemy Losses

The Eighth Army said the Reds lost an estimated 300 killed and wounded in two futile attacks to drive South Korean troops from a knob on Finger Ridge, on the central front, last night and today.

The Reds also lost 200 soldiers in unsucessful assaults against an allied central front outpost east of the Pukhan river during the night, the Eighth Army said. In

Britisher Held on Charge He Posed as Vice Squad Cop

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—A 33-year-old British subject was arrested last night and accused of posing as a vice squad detective to haress a young model

The man, Harold Hughes, of 67-34 Selfridge street, Forest Hills, Queens, was booked early today on two misdemeanor charges—"oppression committed under the pretense of official right," and "falsely impersonating a public official."

District Attorney Frank S. Hogan said Hughes, whose own wife is a cloak and suit model, saw 21-year-old model Patricia Conway on a television program and obtained her home phone number by calling several TV studios.

The DA said Hughes identified himself over the phone as "an investigator for the vice investigation" and made a date to meet Miss Conway in a Broadway restaurant. Miss Conway lives at 145-38 175th street Jamaica, Queens.

At the restaurant, Hogan said, Hughes told Miss Conway "about 700 girls" were involved in the city-wide vice probe, that her name had been mentioned and that he should be "taking her to the station house."

Hogan said Hughes asked the girl if she could raise $5,000 bail and questioned her about her earnings. The DA said Hughes did not come right out and ask her for money but told her he would be in touch with her again.

Miss Conway said Hughes called her again last Monday. The young woman went to her parish priest, who sent her to Hogan's office where she conferred with Assistant District Attorney Anthony J. Liebler, in charge of the vice probe.

On Liebler's advice the young woman made a date and met Hughes yesterday afternoon in the same Broadway restaurant. There Hughes was arrested by Detectives Joseph Nardoza and Robert Danner.

The detectives said Hughes, who has a marked British accent and came to this country in 1949, used the name "Harry Edmunds" in his talks with Miss Conway.

In Hughes' posession when arrested, Hogan said, were the names of eight other models.

Hughes was scheduled for arraignment later today in weekend magistrates court.

Ike Says Stevenson Is Choice Of Big City Bosses; Is Almost Sure He'll Let Nixon Stick

Adlai Would Hold Nixon Blame Till Study of Facts

Is Confident Republicans Will Make Check and Give Findings to U. S. Public

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—Gov. Adlai Stevenson says it "would be wrong" to condemn Sen. Richard Nixon until all the facts are known.

The Democratic presidential nominee, expressing his reaction to disclosure that the Republican vice presidential candidate had used a $16,000 fund contributed by wealthy backers, said in a statement last night:

"I have been repeatedly pressed for comment on the matter of Senator Nixon.

"From what I have heard about it, the question seems to be:

"Who gave the money, was it given to influence the senator's position on public questions, and have any laws been violated?

"I am sure the great Republican party will ascertain these facts, will make them public, and act in accordance with our best traditions and with due respect for the second most important position in the land.

"Condemnation without all the evidence, a practice all too familiar to us, would be wrong."

His press secretary said last night he wrote the statement while he was having dinner with his sister, Mrs. Ernest L. Ives, and her son, Lieut. Timothy Ives, an airforce jet-fighter pilot.

It bears evidence of having been given considerable thought.

Makes No Demand

In typical Stevenson language, the Democratic presidential candidate did not bellow a demand that the facts be made public. He said he was sure they would be.

His phrase, "act in accordance with our best traditions and with due respect for the second most important position in the land," indicates that Stevenson will not permit the Republicans to simply let the matter drop. It could be the subject-matter for a whole series of speeches.

Last week, speaking in Los Angeles, Stevenson presented a fulldress review of his feelings on the question of corruption and misconduct in public office. He said there, as other Democrats have said, that neither party has a "monopoly on virtue."

Get 'What We Deserve'

And while he did not attempt to deny that there has been misconduct in government, he argued that government is a reflection of the moral tone of the whole country. "We get the kind of government we deserve," he said.

Recognizing that the question is one of the prime issues in the campaign, the governor's campaign manager, Wilson Wyatt, said the speech would be rebroadcast.

Stevenson returned to New York last night from his two-day campaign tour through Connecticut and Massachusetts.

Happy About Visit

He said he was "heartened and encouraged" by the reception

Nixon Answers Fund Charges

GOP vice presidential nominee Richard M. Nixon stands on the platform of his whistle-stop train at Marysville, Cal., Sept. 19, as he answers charges of $16,000 worth of outside aid. Senator Nixon delayed his train 10 minutes to answer a Marysville heckler's questions regarding $16,000 aid from wealthy Californians.

Harry James Booked For VFW Ball Oct. 6

Edward E. Parmelee, entertainment chairman for Joyce-Schirick Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, annual ball has announced that he has obtained Harry James and his orchestra for the ball which will be held at the municipal auditorium on Monday, October 6.

Besides Harry James and his orchestra there will be featured his complete program of entertainment of several acts.

Chaplin Faces Bar To His U. S. Return

Film Comedian Claims He Made Provision to Reenter Country

Washington, Sept. 20 (AP)—Movie comedian Charles Chaplin, now on his way to Europe, today faces a government order barring his return to the United States until officials determine whether he can legally reenter under immigration laws.

No reason for the unexpected order was given when it was announced yesterday by Attorney General McGranery. The Justice Department would not elaborate.

Reasons for Action

Under American immigration laws an alien can be refused entry into the country for moral turpitude or for political affiliations, among other reasons.

Chaplin, 63, is an alien, born in England, he came to the U. S. 40

2 Escape Injury As Car Plunges 150 Feet Down Bank

Downtown Men Run Off High Road, Blame Car Lights of Auto Approaching

Two men walked away from a crushed 1938 sedan shortly before midnight yesterday after plunging 150 feet from High Road back of the city sewage disposal plant.

Richard Bell, 18, of 61 Broadway, and Samuel Shoemaker (age not listed), of 45 Murray street, were treated at Kingston Hospital and dismissed, police reported. Police said that Bell was treated for injuries to his left thigh and right leg below the knee. They reported that Bell told them Shoemaker had received a cut on his jaw.

Car Overturns

Officers George M. Dougherty and Francis Loeffler descended from High Road to the vehicle by means of a rope provided by the Kingston Fire Department. They found no one in the car, which was lying on its top.

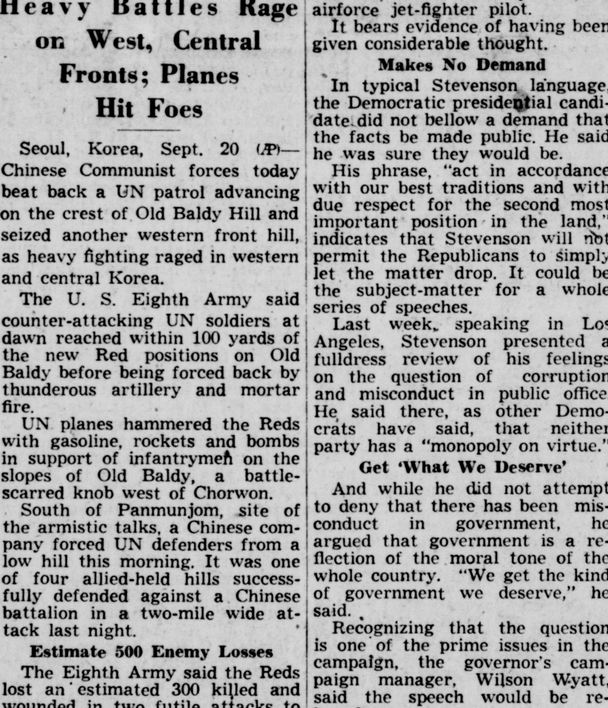

Bell turned up at the hospital for treatment, police reported, and Shoemaker was located at the home of his mother at 45 Murray street. Police said that Shoemaker had gone to bed but went to the hospital later for a thorough examination.

Blames Headlights

Halley Accused of Starting Early Campaign by Mayor

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—Mayor Vincent R. Impellitteri and City Council President Rudolph Halley clashed again yesterday, this time over reports of a Queens sewer investigation and alleged anti-Semitism in the Department of Corrections.

Halley accused the mayor of sitting on the reports. Impellitteri denied this and said the reports were available to "the responsible public officials entitled to inspect these confidential reports."

Halley said he intended to get the information and added:

"To me it is very much reminiscent of the situation • • • which prevailed in New York city during the O'Dwyer administration being whitewashed when O'Dwyer received confidential reports from his commissioner of investigation and then turned around and said there was no gambling or corruption in this city."

Former Mayor William O'Dwyer now is U. S. ambassador to Mexico.

Impellitteri said Halley was guilty of "another outburst of flummery — humbug and nonsense."

"I think he (Halley) should get down to the business for which he was really elected," Impellitteri said, "and that is a constructive job of assuming the duties and responsibilities of his office • • • and not attempt to take over the duties and responsibilities of the mayor as well as those of the commissioner of investigations."

The mayor said he wished that Halley, former chief counsel for the Senate Crime Committee, "would stop running at this early date for the office of mayor."

Impellitteri and Halley are regarded as possible rivals in next year's mayoralty election.

Thursday night the two men criticized each other at a Board of Estimate hearing.

Impellitteri ordered all department heads to give no information to Halley over the telephone but make him put his questions in writing.

General Cites Ditch Given Kefauver at Convention to Get to Adlai

Awaits Review

GOP Top Candidate Is Awaiting Report on Mate's Spending

Aboard Eisenhower Special, Sept. 20 (AP) — Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower last night termed his Democratic opponent in the presidential race the nominee of the "big city bosses."

In the most pointed attack he has made on Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson, the Republican nominee told a cheering audience in Kansas City Stevenson was nominated by the "big city bosses" over Sen. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee. And he added:

"I sympathize wtih the nominee of the Democrat party because of the company he is obliged to keep.

"Perhaps he may disown that company altogether. But this is the payoff question: Will the bosses disown him?"

Almost Set on Nixon

Meanwhile, Eisenhower appeared nearly finally committed to keeping Sen. Richard Nixon of California on the GOP ticket as his running mate. A battle still was going on among Eisenhower's top advisers as to whether he should ask Nixon to step down as vice presidential candidate because of disclosures that the California senator has accepted expense money from a group of wealthy California citizens.

But unless an accounting which Nixon himself said he had asked from Dana Smith, Pasadena lawyer and head of the group, showed something Eisenhower's friends didn't expect, the odds seemed to be on the side of Nixon's staying on the ticket.

Eisenhower was represented by close associates as amazed at the reaction to the Nixon incident.

But these associates said Eisenhower had rejected any dramatic move to ask Nixon to get off the ticket in favor of a speedy review of what expenditures had been made in behalf of the Californian.

The political explosion over Nixon's admitted acceptance of between $16,000 and $17,000 in expense funds still was sifting political dust as Eisenhower whistle stopped across Missouri toward St. Louis.

List of Developments

The swift panaorma of events brought these developments:

1. For the second time in less than seven hours the Republican presidential nominee declared his "confidence" in Nixon. But Eisenhower had called earlier for the California senator to place all of the facts before the people.

2. Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio was said by some of Eisenhower's advisers on this train to have "jumped the gun" by saying in a telephone interview with the Dayton (O.) Journal-Herald that he sees no reason why Nixon should not accept gifts from friends and constituents to help pay even his personal expenses.

3. Some of Eisenhower's friends made it clear the general awaits a speedy, satisfactory explanation from Nixon and Smith, of how the money was spent. When the general gets this, they said he will make up his mind finally.

Says Facts Essential

4. Stevenson got into the Republican act with a statement in New York that the issue involved is whether Nixon accepted the money "to influence the senator's position on public affairs." Stevenson said that any condemnation of Nixon's action "without all the evidence—a practice all too familiar to us, would be wrong."

Eisenhower's two statements admittedly were made without any direct exchange with the vice presidential nominee.

Nevertheless, some of those who have been closest to Eisenhower said they are not ruling out the possibility that the general will ask the Californian to step out on

Boy, 10, Molested Back of School

It was reported to police late yesterday afternoon that a 10-year-old boy had been molested in the woods back of Kingston High School.

Officers Louis W. Sapp, Jr., and Walter Fitzgerald, who were dispatched to the scene, searched the area without result.

The child was reported to have described the man as about five feet six inches tall, with black hair, hatless, in need of a shave and wearing a blue-striped shirt.

Tank-Supported Reds Take Hill, Beat Back UN Drive

52-Minute Session Filled With Arguments on Who Started War

Munsan, Korea, Sept. 20 (AP)—The Korean truce talks adjourned today for the eighth straight week long recess after an angry 52-minute session in which negotiators argued over who started the war.

It was the first plenary meeting since Sept. 12 and produced no headway in the prolonged stalemate on prisoner exchange, major obstacle to a truce.

The Reds agreed to a UN request and recessed the talks at Panmunjom until Sept. 28.

Lt. Gen. William K. Harrison, senior UN delegate, read the Communists a lengthy, blistering statement in answer to their charge that the allies "stand against the people of the whole world." Harrison called it a "lesson in geography."

Says 44 Nations Vote

He bluntly reminded the Reds that 44 nations voted in the UN General Assembly to brand the North Koreans aggressors.

North Korean Gen. Nam Il, the chief Communist delegate, replied that those nations were "voting machines" and satellites of the U. S.

Harrison said this was insult to "the dignity and intelligence of the people of these countries."

Heavy Battles Rage on West, Central Fronts; Planes Hit Foes

Seoul, Korea, Sept. 20 (AP)—Chinese Communist forces today beat back a UN patrol advancing on the crest of Old Baldy Hill and seized another western front hill, as heavy fighting raged in western and central Korea.

The U. S. Eighth Army said counter-attacking UN soldiers at dawn reached within 100 yards of the new Red positions on Old Baldy before being forced back by thunderous artillery and mortar fire.

UN planes hammered the Reds with gasoline, rockets and bombs in support of infantrymen on the slopes of Old Baldy, a battle-scarred knob west of Chorwon.

Estimate 500 Enemy Losses

The Eighth Army said the Reds lost an estimated 300 killed and wounded in two futile attacks to drive South Korean troops from a knob on Finger Ridge, on the central front, last night and today.

The Reds also lost 200 soldiers in unsuccessful assaults against an allied central front outpost east of the Pukhan river during the night, the Eighth Army said. In

Britisher Held on Charge He Posed as Vice Squad Cop

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—A 33-year-old British subject was arrested last night and accused of posing as a vice squad detective to haress a young model

The man, Harold Hughes, of 67-34 Selfridge street, Forest Hills, Queens, was booked early today on two misdemeanor charges —"oppression committed under the pretense of official right," and "falsely impersonating a public official."

District Attorney Frank S. Hogan said Hughes, whose own wife is a cloak and suit model, saw 21-year-old model Patricia Conway on a television program and obtained her home phone number by calling several TV studios.

The DA said Hughes identified himself over the phone as "an investigator for the vice investigation" and made a date to meet Miss Conway in a Broadway restaurant. Miss Conway lives at 145-38 175th street Jamaica, Queens.

At the restaurant, Hogan said, Hughes told Miss Conway "about 700 girls" were involved in the city-wide vice probe, that her name had been mentioned and that he should be "taking her to the station house."

Hogan said Hughes asked the girl if she could raise $5,000 bail and questioned her about her earnings. The DA said Hughes did not come right out and ask her for money but told her he would be in touch with her again.

Miss Conway said Hughes called her again last Monday. The young woman went to her parish priest, who sent her to Hogan's office where she conferred with Assistant District Attorney Anthony J. Liebler, in charge of the vice probe.

On Liebler's advice the young woman made a date and met Hughes yesterday afternoon in the same Broadway restaurant. There Hughes was arrested by Detectives Joseph Nardoza and Robert Danner.

The detectives said Hughes, who has a marked British accent and came to this country in 1949, used the name "Harry Edmunds" in his talks with Miss Conway.

In Hughes' posession when arrested, Hogan said, were the names of eight other models.

Hughes was scheduled for arraignment later today in weekend magistrates court.

Ike Says Stevenson Is Choice Of Big City Bosses; Is Almost Sure He'll Let Nixon Stick

Is Confident Republicans Will Make Check and Give Findings to U. S. Public

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—Gov. Adlai Stevenson says it "would be wrong" to condemn Sen. Richard Nixon until all the facts are known.

The Democratic presidential nominee, expressing his reaction to disclosure that the Republican vice presidential candidate had used a $16,000 fund contributed by wealthy backers, said in a statement last night:

"I have been repeatedly pressed for comment on the matter of Senator Nixon.

"From what I have heard about it, the question seems to be:

"Who gave the money, was it given to influence the senator's position on public questions, and have any laws been violated?

"I am sure the great Republican party will ascertain these facts, will make them public, and act in accordance with our best traditions and with due respect for the second most important position in the land.

"Condemnation without all the evidence, a practice all too familiar to us, would be wrong."

His press secretary said last night he wrote the statement while he was having dinner with his sister, Mrs. Ernest L. Ives, and her son, Lieut. Timothy Ives, an airforce jet-fighter pilot.

It bears evidence of having been given considerable thought.

Makes No Demand

In typical Stevenson language, the Democratic presidential candidate did not bellow a demand that the facts be made public. He said he was sure they would be.

His phrase, "act in accordance with our best traditions and with due respect for the second most important position in the land," indicates that Stevenson will not permit the Republicans to simply let the matter drop. It could be the subject-matter for a whole series of speeches.

Last week, speaking in Los Angeles, Stevenson presented a fulldress review of his feelings on the question of corruption and misconduct in public office. He said there, as other Democrats have said, that neither party has a "monopoly on virtue."

Get 'What We Deserve'

And while he did not attempt to deny that there has been misconduct in government, he argued that government is a reflection of the moral tone of the whole country. "We get the kind of government we deserve," he said.

Recognizing that the question is one of the prime issues in the campaign, the governor's campaign manager, Wilson Wyatt, said the speech would be rebroadcast.

Stevenson returned to New York last night from his two-day campaign tour through Connecticut and Massachusetts.

Happy About Visit

He said he was "heartened and encouraged" by the reception

Nixon Answers Fund Charges

GOP vice presidential nominee Richard M. Nixon stands on the platform of his whistle-stop train at Marysville, Cal., Sept. 19, as he answers charges of $16,000 worth of outside aid. Senator Nixon delayed his train 10 minutes to answer a Marysville heckler's questions regarding $16,000 aid from wealthy Californians.

Chaplin Faces Bar To His U. S. Return

Film Comedian Claims He Made Provision to Reenter Country

Washington, Sept. 20 (AP)—Movie comedian Charles Chaplin, now on his way to Europe, today faces a government order barring his return to the United States until officials determine whether he can legally reenter under immigration laws.

No reason for the unexpected order was given when it was announced yesterday by Attorney General McGranery. The Justice Department would not elaborate.

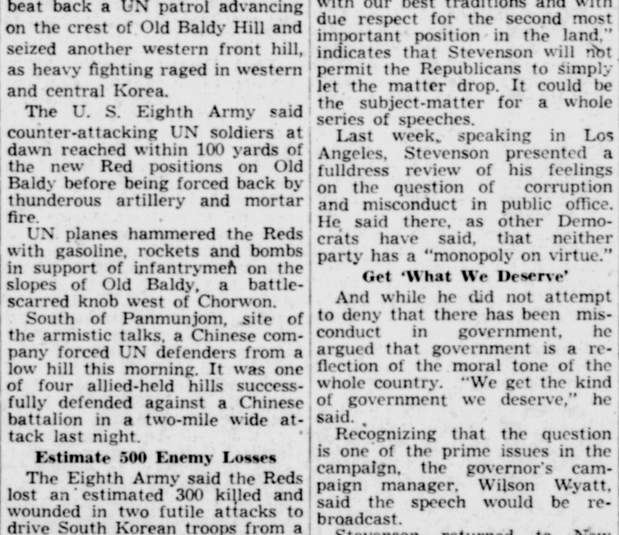

Reasons for Action

Under American immigration laws an alien can be refused entry into the country for moral turpitude or for political affiliations, among other reasons.

Chaplin, 63, is an alien, born in England, he came to the U. S. 40

May Be Barred From U. S.

The Immigration Service has been ordered by Attorney General James P. McGranery to bar screen actor Charlie Chaplin from reentering the U. S. until a hearing determines whether he is "admissible." Chaplin is now en route to England for a movie premiere. Above, he is shown with his wife, the former Oona O'Neill, in New York prior to his sailing. (NEA Telephoto).

2 Escape Injury As Car Plunges 150 Feet Down Bank

Downtown Men Run Off High Road, Blame Car Lights of Auto Approaching

Two men walked away from a crushed 1938 sedan shortly before midnight yesterday after plunging 150 feet from High Road back of the city sewage disposal plant.

Richard Bell, 18, of 61 Broadway, and Samuel Shoemaker (age not listed), of 45 Murray street, were treated at Kingston Hospital and dismissed, police reported. Police said that Bell was treated for injuries to his left thigh and right leg below the knee. They reported that Bell told them Shoemaker had received a cut on his jaw.

Car Overturns

Officers George M. Dougherty and Francis Loeffler descended from High Road to the vehicle by means of a rope provided by the Kingston Fire Department. They found no one in the car, which was lying on its top.

Bell turned up at the hospital for treatment, police reported, and Shoemaker was located at the home of his mother at 45 Murray street. Police said that Shoemaker had gone to bed but went to the hospital later for a thorough examination.

Blames Headlights

Halley Accused of Starting Early Campaign by Mayor

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—Mayor Vincent R. Impellitteri and City Council President Rudolph Halley clashed again yesterday, this time over reports of a Queens sewer investigation and alleged anti-Semitism in the Department of Corrections.

Halley accused the mayor of sitting on the reports. Impellitteri denied this and said the reports were available to "the responsible public officials entitled to inspect these confidential reports."

Halley said he intended to get the information and added:

"To me it is very much reminiscent of the situation • • • which prevailed in New York city during the O'Dwyer administration being whitewashed when O'Dwyer received confidential reports from his commissioner of investigation and then turned around and said there was no gambling or corruption in this city."

Former Mayor William O'Dwyer now is U. S. ambassador to Mexico.

Impellitteri said Halley was guilty of "another outburst of flummery — humbug and nonsense."

"I think he (Halley) should get down to the business for which he was really elected," Impellitteri said, "and that is a constructive job of assuming the duties and responsibilities of his office • • • and not attempt to take over the duties and responsibilities of the mayor as well as those of the commissioner of investigations."

The mayor said he wished that Halley, former chief counsel for the Senate Crime Committee, "would stop running at this early date for the office of mayor."

Impellitteri and Halley are regarded as possible rivals in next year's mayoralty election.

Thursday night the two men criticized each other at a Board of Estimate hearing.

Impellitteri ordered all department heads to give no information to Halley over the telephone but make him put his questions in writing.

General Cites Ditch Given Kefauver at Convention to Get to Adlai

Awaits Review

GOP Top Candidate Is Awaiting Report on Mate's Spending

Aboard Eisenhower Special, Sept. 20 (AP) — Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower last night termed his Democratic opponent in the presidential race the nominee of the "big city bosses."

In the most pointed attack he has made on Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson, the Republican nominee told a cheering audience in Kansas City Stevenson was nominated by the "big city bosses" over Sen. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee. And he added:

"I sympathize wtih the nominee of the Democrat party because of the company he is obliged to keep.

"Perhaps he may disown that company altogether. But this is the payoff question: Will the bosses disown him?"

Almost Set on Nixon

Meanwhile, Eisenhower appeared nearly finally committed to keeping Sen. Richard Nixon of California on the GOP ticket as his running mate. A battle still was going on among Eisenhower's top advisers as to whether he should ask Nixon to step down as vice presidential candidate because of disclosures that the California senator has accepted expense money from a group of wealthy California citizens.

But unless an accounting which Nixon himself said he had asked from Dana Smith, Pasadena lawyer and head of the group, showed something Eisenhower's friends didn't expect, the odds seemed to be on the side of Nixon's staying on the ticket.

Eisenhower was represented by close associates as amazed at the reaction to the Nixon incident.

But these associates said Eisenhower had rejected any dramatic move to ask Nixon to get off the ticket in favor of a speedy review of what expenditures had been made in behalf of the Californian.

The political explosion over Nixon's admitted acceptance of between $16,000 and $17,000 in expense funds still was sifting political dust as Eisenhower whistle stopped across Missouri toward St. Louis.

List of Developments

The swift panaorma of events brought these developments:

1. For the second time in less than seven hours the Republican presidential nominee declared his "confidence" in Nixon. But Eisenhower had called earlier for the California senator to place all of the facts before the people.

2. Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio was said by some of Eisenhower's advisers on this train to have "jumped the gun" by saying in a telephone interview with the Dayton (O.) Journal-Herald that he sees no reason why Nixon should not accept gifts from friends and constituents to help pay even his personal expenses.

3. Some of Eisenhower's friends made it clear the general awaits a speedy, satisfactory explanation from Nixon and Smith, of how the money was spent. When the general gets this, they said he will make up his mind finally.

Says Facts Essential

4. Stevenson got into the Republican act with a statement in New York that the issue involved is whether Nixon accepted the money "to influence the senator's position on public affairs." Stevenson said that any condemnation of Nixon's action "without all the evidence—a practice all too familiar to us, would be wrong."

Eisenhower's two statements admittedly were made without any direct exchange with the vice presidential nominee.

Nevertheless, some of those who have been closest to Eisenhower said they are not ruling out the possibility that the general will ask the Californian to step out on

Boy, 10, Molested Back of School

It was reported to police late yesterday afternoon that a 10-year-old boy had been molested in the woods back of Kingston High School.

Officers Louis W. Sapp, Jr., and Walter Fitzgerald, who were dispatched to the scene, searched the area without result.

The child was reported to have described the man as about five feet six inches tall, with black hair, hatless, in need of a shave and wearing a blue-striped shirt.

New Bible Version To Be Introduced At Local Service

The Kingston Ministerial Association will sponsor a city-wide service Tuesday night, Sept. 30, to introduce the Revised Standard Version of the Bible, scheduled for publication on that date.

Major Walter G. McLeod, post chaplain of the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, will be the main speaker.

The service, one of approximately 3,000 to be held by Protestants in the United States on that date, forms a part of the annual Christian Education Week project of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U. S. A.

The local service will be held at 8 p. m., at the Clinton Avenue Methodist Church.

The revision of the Bible which is to be published Sept. 30 was authorized in 1929 by the International Council of Religious Education. A committee of 15 scholars began work on the task in 1930. Suspended in 1932 because of lack of funds, the work resumed in 1937 with an enlarged committee. The Revised Standard Version of the New Testament was completed and published in 1946.

The revision makes use of ancient manuscripts discovered since the last revision was made, eliminates archaic and ambiguous expressions which obscure the meaning of the King James Version, and corrects terms which have so changed in meaning as to become misleading.

Heralded by leading Protestant churchmen as an aid to Bible reading in the home, the Revised Standard Version will be available either in a one-volume edition of the entire Bible, or in a two-volume of the Old Testament, to match the New Testament version already published.

100 Teachers Added

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—Mayor Vincent R. Impellitteri announced yesterday that 100 school teachers will be added to the city's staff because of an unexpected increase in elementary school enrollment this term. Superintendent of Schools William Jansen said the 518,000 children in the elementary schools represent an increase of 20,000 more than were registered last year and about 15,000 more than the education authorities had expected.

New Bible Version To Be Introduced At Local Service

The Kingston Ministerial Association will sponsor a city-wide service Tuesday night, Sept. 30, to introduce the Revised Standard Version of the Bible, scheduled for publication on that date.

Major Walter G. McLeod, post chaplain of the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, will be the main speaker.

The service, one of approximately 3,000 to be held by Protestants in the United States on that date, forms a part of the annual Christian Education Week project of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U. S. A.

The local service will be held at 8 p. m., at the Clinton Avenue Methodist Church.

The revision of the Bible which is to be published Sept. 30 was authorized in 1929 by the International Council of Religious Education. A committee of 15 scholars began work on the task in 1930. Suspended in 1932 because of lack of funds, the work resumed in 1937 with an enlarged committee. The Revised Standard Version of the New Testament was completed and published in 1946.

The revision makes use of ancient manuscripts discovered since the last revision was made, eliminates archaic and antiquated expressions which obscure the meaning of the King James Version, and corrects terms which have so changed in meaning as to become misleading.

Heralded by leading Protestant churchmen as an aid to Bible reading in the home, the Revised Standard Version will be available either in a one-volume edition of the entire Bible, or in a two-volume of the Old Testament, to match the New Testament version already published.

100 Teachers Added

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—Mayor Vincent R. Superintendent of Schools William Jansen said the 518,000 children in the elementary schools represent an increase of 20,000 more than were registered last year and about 15,000 more than the education authorities had expected.

Foam Rubber Used Widely in Furniture

Time was when the only self-respecting divan was provided with downfilled cushions, soft and comfortable but requiring frequent plumpings.

Now you'll find many items of new modern furniture with cushions which are just as soft and soothing but which spring back into shape of their own accord when the sitter arises.

These are of latex foam, commonly known as foam rubber, a product coming into wide use, especially in modern sectional furniture.

Warren Lockwood, director of the Natural Rubber Bureau, points out that us of latex foam upholstery makes even large pieces of furniture much lighter in weight, and thus easy to move about when the little woman cleans house.

Imposing Effect Provided By Blinds at Front Door

Modern building costs have made elaborate doors and front entrances for new homes expensive.

A tip for achieving the effect desired without a large cash outlay is offered by the National Association of Home Builders. It points out that a pair of blinds on each side of stock door and frame can produce an imposing decorative effect. The blinds are not hung on hinges, but fastened directly to the house with lag screws.

Hong Kong (AP)—Lee Hong, a strong but unemployed Chinese, was brought into court for stealing an iron door from an iron works. "You seem so fond of iron doors," said Magistrate D. K. Greenfield, "that I shall put you behind one for one month." And he did.

Penny for Fuse Can Start Fire

A penny in a fuse socket can set the house afire, the Rural Electrification Administration of the U.S. Department of Agriculture warns. Many people still are unaware of the danger of overheating wires by replacing a burned-out fuse with a penny.

The fuse is a protection. When it "blows," it warns that wires are overloaded — that is, more electricity is being carried than the circuit can handle safely. The trouble may be using too many appliances on one circuit, or some defect in an appliance, a cord or the wiring. The burning out of the fuse cuts off the current, thus avoiding fires from overheated hidden wires.

Every home should have extra fuses of the right size conveniently near the service box where they can be ready if a fuse blows. To prevent trouble, wiring should be inspected and approved by a qualified inspector and then re-inspected every few years.

The right size fuse protects the wire. For light circuits, a 15 ampere fuse is recommended. Appliance circuits take a 20-ampere fuse. This information will be stamped on the metal at the bottom of the fuse.

Television Changes Room Arrangement

Placing the television receiver for most effective use and for the greatest pleasure of the family is developing a new concept of furniture arrangement.

Engineers say that direct-view receivers give best results when viewed from a distance equal to three to six times the height of the screen, and that this should be considered when placing furniture. Experts also recommended sitting no more than 30 degrees to the side of the screen.

In the average room of about 12 feet by 15 feet, placing the set in a corner with sofa and chairs against the walls in the opposite corner, permits the greatest number to view the screen comfortably.

Color Contrast Favored By Modern Decorators

Contrast of bright colors with subdued tints, or use of the deeper hues, contrasted with pastel tints of the same color, meet favor with some modern decorators for living rooms.

One color authority suggests that deep blue, deep plum, scarlet or orange may be appropriate for accenting walls of French gray. Lettuce green and silver are suggested for accenting walls of soft, deep green. Deep brown, soft blue, silver, or delicate yellow are suggested to complement ivory.

Decor for Junior

Juvenile furniture decorations are applied by many methods. In some cases, stenciled patterns are brushed on. In others, they are sprayed. Decalcomania decorations are also used. Striping is applied by hand, by spraying or by the use of mechanical stripers.

Remove the Remover

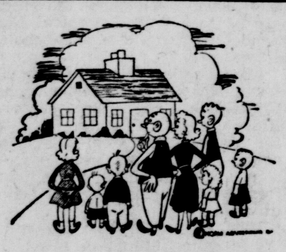

Most liquid paint removers contain a wax and this must be removed from the surface before fresh paint or varnish is applied. Either denatured alcohol or naphtha should be used for this job. Keep away from an open flame.

Restoring Cedar Scent

When the aroma of a cedar closet starts to lose strength, it can often be restored by sanding or scraping down the wood. The effect is to open up the pores of the wood so the pungent oils can get out.

Check Garage Doors

Look over the garage doors before winter comes. Make sure that the hardware is free from rust. A coat of paint for the surfaces will protect against the storms ahead.

THE LOGANPORT

Handsome and Truly Different

Bedrooms	Four
Closets	Eight
Cubage	37,000 ft.
Dimensions	50' x 27'

Because it is such a handsome house with such a strikingly 'different' style, "The Loganport" will be a distinctive decorative asset in any neighborhood; it will be equally "at home" on level or sloping ground. An abundance of windows greatly enhances the overall appearance of the house; bay windows plus the small but decorative window looking out on the front terrace add greatly to the appeal of the front of "The Loganport."

Measuring 50'x27', this house requires at least a 70 foot lot. Cubage of "The Loganport" is 37,000 feet. A front facing of fieldstone and a clapboard finish on the rest of the house seem best to bring out the distinctive architectural features of this charming home.

Both the front terrace and the entryway itself can be made as attractive as the home owner desires. Appropriate plantings such as small, friendly shrubs and bushes and the addition of distinctive little 'extras' such as an old-fashioned lantern above the front door and a brass knocker on the door, can do much to give the front of "The Loganport" a real personality.

Centrally located on the first floor of the house, the library is a pleasant, well lighted room containing three windows. Bookshelves line the front wall of the room. There also are bookshelves built into the two back corners of the room; thus, the family that lives in "The Loganport" will have no excuse for leaving books laying around on tables, couches, etc.

If preferred, this room designated as a library could serve as a den or as a guest room. The homemaker can have the room serve two purposes if she so desires.

Although a two car garage is specified in the accompanying plan, a one car garage can be constructed instead. Such an arrangement should, of course, be made with the building contractor before actual construction is started.

Welcome features in "The Loganport' are the two bathrooms on the second floor. These baths will be especially appreciated during the morning rush by the large family living in this comfortable, well-planned home.

Both the heating plant and the laundry should be installed in the basement of "The Loganport."

Blueprints Available

Complete plans and specifications for this house and all other "Home of the Week" designs are available at moderate cost.

For plan prices, write to the Home Building Editor, Kingston Daily Freeman, and enclose a self-addresed, 3c stamped envelope. Allow 7 to 10 days for a reply.

TO REPLACE FAMED MANSION—This is the architect's sketch of an unusual 15-story "twin" office building to be erected by Ivor B. Clark on the 47th and 48th Street corners of New York's Fifth Avenue. The 47th Street site is now occupied by the famous Gould mansion, one of the last remaining relics of the Avenue's 19th Century residential magnificence. The old Goelet mansion, razed in 1942, stood on the 48th Street corner. The new building will be U-shaped, the two main parts seen in the sketch being connected in the rear.

Thorough Closing Of Summer Home Will Save Trouble

Careful precautions taken when closing the summer vacation home will prevent damage by weather, vandals and rodents.

The plumbing should be arranged so that all pipes can be drained by closing two or three valves and opening others. If steam or hot water heat is used, the entire system should be drained. Water should be siphoned from the toilet bowl and drained from plumbing traps.

Provide solid, heavy board panels to fit tightly over windows and doors and bolt them on the inside. For the front door, use a solid panel that is fastened with a strong padlock.

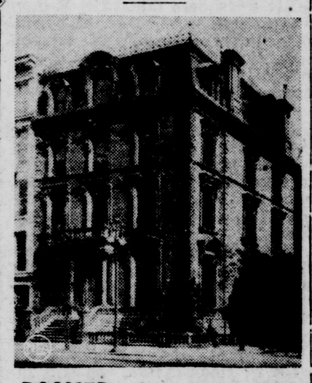

The house should have sufficient grilles and vents to allow air to circulate and prevent dampness from accumulating. All flues, vents and louvers should be covered with both fine and heavy screening to keep out insects and animals.

Powder Noisy Floor

Unless the boards are quite loose, in which case re-nailing is required, floor squeaks usually can be eliminated by dusting talcum powder into the cracks between the floor boards.

Bedroom Color Scheme

The color scheme for a recently decorated bedroom was taken from a framed print of a camellin that was to be hung in the room.

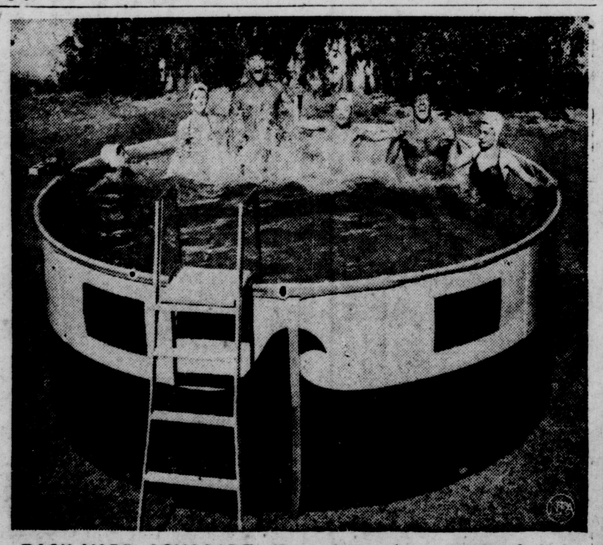

DOOMED—New York's Fifth Avenue will soon say good-by to the last relic of its 19th-Century grandeur remaining between 12th and 61st Streets. It's the old Gould mansion, built nearly 100 years ago, pictured above as it looked in 1908. In 1868 the famous Helen Gould was born there. The site will be occupied by one of twin 15-story office buildings to be erected by Ivor B. Clark.

Pantry to Powder Room

Pantries and hall-ends in old houses can be converted into attractive powder rooms with lavatory and water closet.

Wear a Dust Mask

It's a good idea to wear a dust mask when doing large amounts of sanding. A mask should also be worn when sanding off paint and varnish.

BACK-YARD AQUACADE—Youngsters enjoy a good splash in this portable swimming pool, which a Los Angeles manufacturer claims can be set up within a half hour. Weighing less than 200 pounds assembled, the pool is 40 feet in circumference and stands five feet high. Walls are made of aluminum panels and the inside is lined with a waterproof plastic.

Bright Hues Are Kitchen Asset

If your kitchen doesn't sparkle with bright, cheerful colors that pick you up no matter what your mood, give it a complete color reconditioning.

A picnic snack and a cold meal or two in the back yard or on the lawn will take the family out of the house and allow the work to be done with a minimum of fuss and bother. At the same time the hot weather season will prompt you to select fairly cool hues that can be lived with the year 'round.

Harmonize Surfaces

In decorating the kitchen, remember that all surfaces—floor, ceiling, walls, countertops and equipment — contribute color and should therefore be in harmonious hues. A ceiling of glaring white, or floor too dark in tone, for instance, can completely upset the color balance of the room, the Tile Council of America points out.

Keep woodwork in its natural finish or paint it the same color as the walls, or somewhat lighter. Choose other permanent materials such as clay tile for countertops in your favorite shade, as they will be there for the life of your kitchen.

Select warm hues, the various shades of yellow and red, for stimulating effect. Bright hues reflect more light than dark, and thereby make work much easier. Use a few colors rather than several, to prevent a feeling of "busyness," especially if the kitchen is small.

Choose quality materials which will not fade or be injured by acids and grease. For drainboards and countertops clay tile is one of the most satisfactory, since its colors are baked in and permanent.

Avoid Intense Colors

Clear colors go well with the white or cream of the surface of refrigerator, range and metal cabinets. Avoid such intense ones as orange, pure green or violet, for they will soon prove irritating.

Finally, plan yourself into the color scheme. If blonde, you will look best in setting of peach, soft blue, green or yellow. Brunettes appear best against background of tan, brown, yellows on the orange side, and blue-greens.

Solid Fill Is Needed Against Foundation

After basement foundation walls are built, there remains a considerable space between the masonry walls and the edge of the hole excavated for the basement.

This space should be filled with solid earth, preferably the subsoil that came out of the excavation—never with large stones, scrap lumber or other rubbish.

The idea is to create an earth condition as solid as the original undisturbed ground. Therefore, the earth going into the back-fill should be spread in layers no more than 18 inches thick and each layer should be wet down and thoroughly tamped to make the earth pack firmly.

If this is not done, the ground will settle and leave a reservoir for water against the basement walls which will eventually cause trouble. Scraps of lumber dumped into the refilled area provide food and a harbor for termites.

Larger Fuel Supply In Homes Advised

Fuel experts advise home owners to increase their facilities for fuel storage. With a substantial backlog on hand, the householder will have a buffer against temporary shortages and price rises.

Many home owners are replacing smaller oil tanks with 1000 to 1800-gallon tanks, says the Plumbing and Heating Industries Bureau. These larger tanks will take care of the major portion of the year's supply of fuel oil.

Larger tanks or coal bins need not take up precious space in a basement or utility room. They may be located under the driveway with a top opening for filling.

Joining Two Boards

To make a wide board out of two narrow boards, drive nails into the edge of one board. Remove the nail heads and file the ends to points. Then lay both boards flat on the floor so the nails are between them and with one board against the wall, drive the two boards together. This is easier and quicker than trying to make dowel joints by getting holes bored evenly.

Wrong Height For Counters Brings Fatigue

The efficiency kitchen is just a dream for many women. There are still a lot of inefficient kitchens around, the experts say.

One of the big reasons some housewives are needlessly putting in extra, tiring hours in the kitchen, some home economists agree, is that counters don't fit the woman. A good height for counters is 32 inches. That's just about right for the average 5-foot 4-inch American housewife. But the height of counters should vary for the taller or shorter woman.

Some kitchens need larger counter tops. Since dishwashing ordinarily is from right to left, the counter just to the right of the sink should be at least 36 inches long, and to the left, at least 30 inches.

The depth of these counters again depends upon the homemaker's size. About 24 inches is best for the average housewife. And all counter tops should be durable, waterproof and, above all, easy to clean.

If you are not prepared to adjust your size by remodeling, there are still many labor-saving steps you can take in and around your work centers. For instance, putting a stain-proof material back of the stove or at the sink splashback will save a few backaches.

Why Barns Run North

Many big barns run north and south because in the old days farmers wanted to expose as little of the structure as possible to the effects of moss, which formed on the north side. The custom has carried over to the present day.

Foam Rubber Used Widely in Furniture

Time was when the only self-respecting divan was provided with downfilled cushions, soft and comfortable but requiring frequent plumpings.

Now you'll find many items of new modern furniture with cushions which are just as soft and soothing but which spring back into shape of their own accord when the sitter arises.

These are of latex foam, commonly known as foam rubber, a product coming into wide use, especially in modern sectional furniture.

Warren Lockwood, director of the Natural Rubber Bureau, points out that us of latex foam upholstery makes even large pieces of furniture much lighter in weight, and thus easy to move about when the little woman cleans house.

Imposing Effect Provided By Blinds at Front Door

Modern building costs have made elaborate doors and front entrances for new homes expensive.

A tip for achieving the effect desired without a large cash outlay is offered by the National Association of Home Builders. It points out that a pair of blinds on each side of stock door and frame can produce an imposing decorative effect. The blinds are not hung on hinges, but fastened directly to the house with lag screws.

Door-Stealer Jailed

Penny for Fuse Can Start Fire

A penny in a fuse socket can set the house afire, the Rural Electrification Administration of the U.S. Department of Agriculture warns. Many people still are unaware of the danger of overheating wires by replacing a burned-out fuse with a penny.

The fuse is a protection. When it "blows," it warns that wires are overloaded — that is, more electricity is being carried than the circuit can handle safely. The trouble may be using too many appliances on one circuit, or some defect in an appliance, a cord or the wiring. The burning out of the fuse cuts off the current, thus avoiding fires from overheated hidden wires.

Every home should have extra fuses of the right size conveniently near the service box where they can be ready if a fuse blows. To prevent trouble, wiring should be inspected and approved by a qualified inspector and then re-inspected every few years.

The right size fuse protects the wire. For light circuits, a 15 ampere fuse is recommended. Appliance circuits take a 20-ampere fuse. This information will be stamped on the metal at the bottom of the fuse.

Television Changes Room Arrangement

Placing the television receiver for most effective use and for the greatest pleasure of the family is developing a new concept of furniture arrangement.

Engineers say that direct-view receivers give best results when viewed from a distance equal to three to six times the height of the screen, and that this should be considered when placing furniture. Experts also recommended sitting no more than 30 degrees to the side of the screen.

In the average room of about 12 feet by 15 feet, placing the set in a corner with sofa and chairs against the walls in the opposite corner, permits the greatest number to view the screen comfortably.

Color Contrast Favored By Modern Decorators

Contrast of bright colors with subdued tints, or use of the deeper hues, contrasted with pastel tints of the same color, meet favor with some modern decorators for living rooms.

One color authority suggests that deep blue, deep plum, scarlet or orange may be appropriate for accenting walls of French gray. Lettuce green and silver are suggested for accenting walls of soft, deep green. Deep brown, soft blue, silver, or delicate yellow are suggested to complement ivory.

Decor for Junior

Juvenile furniture decorations are applied by many methods. In some cases, stenciled patterns are brushed on. In others, they are sprayed. Decalcomania decorations are also used. Striping is applied by hand, by spraying or by the use of mechanical stripers.

Most liquid paint removers contain a wax and this must be removed from the surface before fresh paint or varnish is applied. Either denatured alcohol or naphtha should be used for this job. Keep away from an open flame.

RED HOUSEKEEPING

In a recent letter to the Russian newspaper "Trud," a soviet housewife complained of the lack of labor saving devices in her home. She couched her letter in words of flattery for her leaders and the Communist Party but her dissatisfaction with her plight was evident from what she said.

She pointed out that labor saving devices would allow women to take the active part in Party activities which they are urged to assume. Her letter spoke longingly of a washing machine, a device found in millions of American homes on all economic levels. She deplored the shortage of cook-books, of home furniture repair services and refrigerators. Her letter sounded like that of a woman who had had just about enough of primitive methods of keeping house and could keep quiet no longer even if she were frightened by Party discipline.

The Russian housewife is not likely to find her lot improved as long as the Communists remain in power. It is more important for the leaders to make guns than it is to manufacture washing machines, more imperative to use paper and presses to create propaganda than cook books, and tanks are many times more useful to the Communists than refrigerators.

American women can only sympathize with the women in Russia who have been shut off from the progress that has revolutionized housework. Until the people of that unfortunate country shake off their political slavery the women will be bound to the drudgery of housework unlightened by all the work saving devices invented and produced by free people.

LONG FAITHFUL

Long is still a magic name in Louisiana. The recent primary nominated for Congress Dr. George S. Long, brother of the late Senator Huey, the state boss until his assassination in 1935. Huey's widow filled out the balance of his term, succeeded by their son, Russell, who occupies the seat today. Still another Long, Earl, Huey's brother, was governor until recently.

If the experience of other states is any test, the popularity of the Long name will soon induce other owners of it, not necessarily related to Huey, to try to cash in on the name in politics. Something should be done to prevent such people from capitalizing on the reputation of established names. How to do it is the problem. Intelligent watchfulness on the part of voters, definite effort to know the personal history of candidates is important.

Governor Stevenson made both friends and enemies when he refused to sign an anti-cat bill for the protection of birds in Illinois. Cats have nine lives however, and will probably be able to vote nine times as often as birds.

Probably more women will vote this year than ever before. More of them realize that they only have to admit to being "over twenty-one."

A dog's life has some advantages, at that. Someone else always pays the tax for the license.

SEWARD AND HIS FOLLY

Fame is a curious thing. A century ago few Americans were better known than the now almost forgotten William H. Seward, Governor of New York for two terms and senator for two. He was a founder of the Republican party and generally expected to be its presidential candidate in 1860. His convention defeat by the far less prominent Abraham Lincoln caused more grief than that produced in any presidential race since the defeat of Henry Clay.

Lincoln never thought of anyone else for his secretary of state. At first inclined to take the lead, Seward soon recognized the qualities of his superior and aided him loyally. After Lincoln's assassination he retained his post under Andrew Johnson, and in 1867 achieved one of the few triumphs of that ill-starred administration. He bought Alaska from the Russians for what now seems the trivial sum of $7,200,000. "Seward's Folly" it was called by his critics, who saw little use in acquiring a land of ice and snow.

Apart from the wealth since found there, Alaska is an invaluable outpost against enemies from another continent. It is Seward's monument.

'These Days'

By GEORGE SOKOLSKY

TAFT-HARTLEY

It has become customary in this country to take an idea and turn it into a bad word. Those who play with semantics call such a word a symbol; actually, it is an old trick, one of the oldest in public relations. It is like making Herbert Hoover the symbol for a deep depression, although no objective economic history from 1920 to 1932 can possibly fix such responsibility on him.

The Taft-Hartley Law, passed in 1947 by the 80th Congress, was a measure to replace the Wagner Law, which had been prepared by Lee Pressman, who has since confessed that he had been a member of the Communist Party. At the moment of the passage of the Act, a committee of Congress was appointed to watch its operations and to propose such amendments and changes as might become necessary.

President Truman vetoed the Act and it was passed over his veto by Congress, Democrats as well as Republicans overriding him. This incensed the Little Man, who has refused to employ many of its provisions and who has renamed it, "The Slave Labor Act," which is a cheap trick of a vindictive mind.

The C.I.O., which has prospered during the existence of the Taft-Hartley Law, is violently opposed to it. The C.I.O. wants no law or a reversion of the Wagner Act as prepared by Pressman when he was the C.I.O.'s lawyer.

Now, along comes Adlai Stevenson, who proposes the rewriting of the Taft-Hartley Law. He does not go along with Harry Truman. He says:

"I don't say that everything in the Taft-Hartley Act is wrong, it isn't. And moreover, I'll say frankly that I don't think it's a slave labor law, either. But I do say that it was biased and politically inspired and has not improved labor relations in a single plant.

"We must have a new law and my conclusion is that we can best remedy the defects in the old law by scrapping it and starting over again. What should be retained from the old law can best be written into the new law after the political symbolism of the Taft-Hartley Act is behind us."

No one can object to the amendment of any law on the statute books. It is done every day when Congress is in session. But note what Stevenson really says in those two paragraphs: he wants to scrap the Taft-Hartley Law because it has become a bad symbol.

He says, in five points, how he would rewrite the law:

Point 1. He advocates the universal closed shop;

Point 2. He advocates union responsibility much as it is written in the Taft-Hartley Law with a bit of FEPC thrown in. With regard to the Taft-Hartley Law's provisions against unfair practices by unions, he says:

"Yet I think it is only common sense to acknowledge that we must forbid such practices as jurisdictional strikes, and strikes or boycotts attempting to force an employer to deal with one union when another has been certified as the representative of his employes."

So, Point 3. He advocates outlawing unfair bargaining practices by unions or employes.

Point 4. He rejects the labor injunction; that is, he reduces all labor-management relations to a function of the executive branch of the government without judicial review. This is Fascism.

Point 5. Here Adlai Stevenson gets stuck. He is required to make a constructive suggestion, but this is what he says:

"I have no miracle-drug solution for this problem. I am clear, though, that where the government must intervene in these private disputes, its purpose must be not just to stop the strike, but to see that the dispute gets settled.

"I am clear, too, that the new law must recognize that these emergency cases are always different. It's a proven mistake for Congress to prescribe in advance the same old patent medicine for all of them."

Mr. Stevenson is a lawyer. He is presently the governor of a state and has to sign or veto legislation dealing with a vast number of subjects. Few of the laws passed fit every imaginable case, even laws concerning murder, rape and burglary. That is why offenders are brought into courts to be tried by a judge and jury, where they can be defended by counsel in the presence of the public and press. That is why under our concept of human values, acts of legislation are subject to judicial review.

Mr. Stevenson knows that.

That Body of Yours

By JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

A DRUG TO RELIEVE ANXIETY

In a world that has been upset before, during and after World War 2, physicians, old and young, and the public generally, are seeking drugs that will give relief in pain and anxiety without serious side effects and that will not be habit-forming.

Many individuals are so upset mentally and emotionally that it is causing disturbances of the body and they seek the physician's help for some body symptoms. To relieve the body symptoms, treatment of the mental and emotional symptoms must come first.

In Journal of Mental Science, London, Dr. S. Smith reports seventeen patients, 12 women and five men, who had a combination of psychological indications of anxiety and tension and somatic (body) symptoms such as sweating, tremor, and palpitation of the heart. All these symptoms had received treatment from psychologists and psychiatrists before treatment with hexamethonium. The effect of hexamethonium was determined by the effect of the drug upon the sympatheticotonic (contraction or tightening of sympathetic nervous system) signs and symptoms.

Four of the group were treated in hospital and the remainder as outpatients. Each patient took one tablet (0.25 Gm.) after meals twice a day for five days, then three times a day for another five days and so on up to four or five tablets every day. It was found that the best objective results were usually obtained between the 6th and 10th week of such treatment.

Where there was a history of a heart stroke (corinary thrombosis) or a brain stroke (apoplexy), hexamethonium was not given. High blood pressure—the usual reason for use of hexamethonium—was lowered in 11 cases. Varying degrees of improvement were seen in all patients. Excellent results were obtained in some by removing body disturbances (tremor, sweating, palpitation) which in turn were causing the patient much anxiety. Anxiety is chronic fear. The side effects of the drug were very slight.

While most physicians dislike prescribing drugs just to relieve pain or fears, there are times when it becomes necessary and this drug gave very satisfactory results.

The Champ

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON

Washington — Ex-Gov. Harold Stassen is serving as Ike's secret ambassador to labor and did a Herculean job of trying to appease top union leaders before the general's A. F. of L. speech—to no avail.

Stassen, who also wrote Ike's AFL speech, first had a talk with President Bill Green, urging that the AFL not take a definite stand in favor of Stevenson. Green gave him no encouragement. Stassen also talked to Richard Gray, head of the AFL building and construction trades who had been a strong Eisenhower supporter but later switched to Stevenson. Likewise he talked several times to George Meany, AFL secretary.

Stassen's first talk with Meany was around Labor Day, at which time the ex-governor of Minnesota, now president of the University of Pennsylvania, told him in brief:

"The general is thinking very seriously about Taft-Hartley, and it might be he would come out for repeal. If so, of course, it would increase defections from the Taft wing of the party, and we would have to do something to make up for it."

What Stassen wanted was that the AFL either give Ike some tacit support or else hold off endorsing Stevenson. However, Meany made no commitment.

"The general should do what he thinks best, and we should do what we think is best," he said, in brief.

Persistent Stassen

Stassen, however, approached Meany a second time on Sept. 4, again urged that the AFL hold off regarding Stevenson. But Meany refused to trade.

"It's something the general should decide on the merits," he said, "and it's something we also should decide on the merits."

Not satisfied, Stassen came back again. The last time he saw Meany was on Sunday, Sept. 14, one day before the AFL convention was to meet, when he urged that Eisenhower have the privilege of meeting with the executive council of the AFL before he addressed the convention. At this time Ike would let them look at the text of his address and make any changes before he delivered it to the delegates.

This also was turned down. Meany and other leaders took the position that AFL delegates should be free to discuss and vote their own political ideas without any tacit direction from the executive council.

Any advance perusal or correction of Eisenhower's speech, it was felt, carried implied approval, and might prejudice the freedom of the convention.

Finally Stassen came back with an invitation to the top labor leaders to lunch with Eisenhower after finishing his speech. This, they felt, implied no pledge of support and was accepted.

Adroit Louey Johnson

Ex-Secretary of Defense Louey Johnson, who performed money-raising miracles for the Democrats in 1948, has been sounded out by the Republicans to raise funds for the GOP ticket this year.

The irony is that Johnson got the key to his 1948 contributors from two Republicans. Johnson was on good terms privately with Sinclair Weeks, the GOP finance chairman, and Sen. Styles Bridges of New Hampshire. From there, he wangled the Republicans' secret list of contributors.

Then Johnson made the rounds and hit up each Republican for a Democratic contribution too, arguing that it was safer to place money on both sides. The implication was that if the Democrats remained in power they might remember the big firms that contributed to the GOP only.

Note—the Democrats also are trying to bring Johnson into the 1952 campaign as a member of a Veterans-for-Stevenson braintrust. So far, the ex-secretary of defense has told both parties that he will have to check with his doctor first.

Real-Estate Lobby

The powerful real-estate lobby, which Washington's Sen. Harry Cain has served so faithfully, is now going to bat to get their friend and servant re-elected. One scheme the real-estate boys have hit upon to fill his campaign chest is the old chain-letter gag, this one asking for one-dollar contributions.

This column has obtained a copy of a confidential letter to apartment operators, outlining the scheme. The letter is signed by Donald Haas and C. A. Nicholson, who run the Apartment Owners' Association in Washington state.

"Senator Cain has consistently voted against federal rent control, public housing and other controls over real property," the letter points out approvingly. "He is opposed to federal ownership of tidelands, and a firm opponent of government deficit financing. . . .

"We who believe in the principles of freedom of property rights, operation of the free and private enterprise system and a balanced budget in government, cannot afford to stand by while Senator Cain is attacked," the letter continues. "A plan has been devised whereby financial support can be given to Senator Cain's campaign. And all it will cost you is $1.00 plus postage for six letters, plus postage for six letters, plus a few minutes of your time."

The letter then outlines the chain-letter plan, concluding that, "a chain of letters sweeping across the country can re-elect our friend."

Note—The post office has ruled that chain letters are illegal, though this may not apply if the money is intended as campaign contributions.

Kefauver's Friends Penalized

Senator Kefauver's former campaign staff has been hit by another casualty. Right after the Chicago convention, two of his boosters — Downey Rice and George Martin—were quietly fired from Sen. Lyndon Johnson's preparedness committee. Lyndon has long been jealous of Estes.

Now Kefauver's ex-campaign manager, Gael Sullivan, has lost his job.

He was notified that his contract would not be renewed with the Motion Pictures Association. Knowing this, he beat them to the gun and resigned.

Do You Remember

By SOPHIE MILLER

I am astounded by the wonderful government set up going back a century or so in this locality. Right now before me are the "By-laws of the Fire Deparment of the Village of Rondout, adopted June 22, 1858." It was printed in Rondout by J. H. Gildersleeve, printer. The book is from Irving Scott's collection and like other items given me by the family is in perfect condition. Their "Order of Business" some 96 years ago went along the same line as we have today. It started off with roll call, minutes of preceding meeting, reports of standing committee and the selection of committees etc. It is interesting to learn the names of some of the first trustees, some of whom were: Donald McMillan, James G. Tubby, Palmer A. Canfield, Jacob Derrenbacher and George B. Hibbard. James G. Tubby was first president.

Mr. Scott, or his family also collected various tickets. There is one of the Amity Council, Private Soiree, at Washington Hall, Monday, evening, December 27, 1875. Tickets, admitting gentlemen and ladies, $1. Music by Goeller's Orchestra. Another interesting one dated December 16, 1862 is printed thus on top..Mr.....and Lady." The ladies' names to be filled in. It was also a Private Social Soiree, at Washington Hall to start at 7 and winding up at 1 or 2 p. m. It definitely states on the ticket, gentleman without ladies not admitted. The committee listed were J. DuBois, Jr., Wm. B. Scott and C. Lowerhouse. There are several others which I will describe another time.

In the good old days of February 20, 1884, The Kingston Daily Freeman gave the program of the Kingston Academy exercises which were held at Academy Hall. Perhaps some readers remember these students in later life. Mamie Williamson gave a recitation called "Saxon Grit." Belle B. Myers read "Papa's Letter." Nellie Shaffer read an essay called "What Shall We Read?" Arthur C. Connelly gave a declamation called "Cicero vs. Catiline." A piano duet was played by Helen E. Osborn, and Florence L. Humphrey called "Midsummer's Night Dream." Anna L. Blauvelt gave the "Story of Evangeline." Sadie E. Schutt recited "The First Settlers Story." "A Second Trial" was read by Clara D. Norton. Claude Odell gave a "Modern Sermon." "The Brooklyn Bridge" in essay form was read by Myra E. Bush. The Polish Boy was read by Lizzie D. Roosa and a piano and violin composition was played by James Van Buren and Arthur C. Connelly. The above names all seem familar to me.

Solomon Vogel of 86 Abeel street, Rondout, N. Y. back in 1884 was advertising as the importer of Canada West Horses, "good farm draft and driving horses always at hand and now at reduced prices.

There is a will of a lady of the town of Saugerties, which was proved and admitted to probate, date of will July 7, 1883. It gave to another lady, one feather bed, one bedstead, two pillows, one bolster, three sheets, one table, table cloth, two pair of pillow cases, six silver teaspoons and the kitchen table. No doubt an interesting story goes with such a will.

RED HOUSEKEEPING

In a recent letter to the Russian newspaper "Trud," a soviet housewife complained of the lack of labor saving devices in her home. She couched her letter in words of flattery for her leaders and the Communist Party but her dissatisfaction with her plight was evident from what she said.

She pointed out that labor saving devices would allow women to take the active part in Party activities which they are urged to assume. Her letter spoke longingly of a washing machine, a device found in millions of American homes on all economic levels. She deplored the shortage of cook-books, of home furniture repair services and refrigerators. Her letter sounded like that of a woman who had had just about enough of primitive methods of keeping house and could keep quiet no longer even if she were frightened by Party discipline.

The Russian housewife is not likely to find her lot improved as long as the Communists remain in power. It is more important for the leaders to make guns than it is to manufacture washing machines, more imperative to use paper and presses to create propaganda than cook books, and tanks are many times more useful to the Communists than refrigerators.

American women can only sympathize with the women in Russia who have been shut off from the progress that has revolutionized housework. Until the people of that unfortunate country shake off their political slavery the women will be bound to the drudgery of housework unlightened by all the work saving devices invented and produced by free people.

LONG FAITHFUL

Long is still a magic name in Louisiana. The recent primary nominated for Congress Dr. George S. Long, brother of the late Senator Huey, the state boss until his assassination in 1935. Huey's widow filled out the balance of his term, succeeded by their son, Russell, who occupies the seat today. Still another Long, Earl, Huey's brother, was governor until recently.

If the experience of other states is any test, the popularity of the Long name will soon induce other owners of it, not necessarily related to Huey, to try to cash in on the name in politics. Something should be done to prevent such people from capitalizing on the reputation of established names. How to do it is the problem. Intelligent watchfulness on the part of voters, definite effort to know the personal history of candidates is important.

Governor Stevenson made both friends and enemies when he refused to sign an anti-cat bill for the protection of birds in Illinois. Cats have nine lives however, and will probably be able to vote nine times as often as birds.

Probably more women will vote this year than ever before. More of them realize that they only have to admit to being "over twenty-one."

A dog's life has some advantages, at that. Someone else always pays the tax for the license.

SEWARD AND HIS FOLLY

Fame is a curious thing. A century ago few Americans were better known than the now almost forgotten William H. Seward, Governor of New York for two terms and senator for two. He was a founder of the Republican party and generally expected to be its presidential candidate in 1860. His convention defeat by the far less prominent Abraham Lincoln caused more grief than that produced in any presidential race since the defeat of Henry Clay.

Lincoln never thought of anyone else for his secretary of state. At first inclined to take the lead, Seward soon recognized the qualities of his superior and aided him loyally. After Lincoln's assassination he retained his post under Andrew Johnson, and in 1867 achieved one of the few triumphs of that ill-starred administration. He bought Alaska from the Russians for what now seems the trivial sum of $7,200,000. "Seward's Folly" it was called by his critics, who saw little use in acquiring a land of ice and snow.

Apart from the wealth since found there, Alaska is an invaluable outpost against enemies from another continent. It is Seward's monument.

'These Days'

TAFT-HARTLEY

It has become customary in this country to take an idea and turn it into a bad word. Those who play with semantics call such a word a symbol; actually, it is an old trick, one of the oldest in public relations. It is like making Herbert Hoover the symbol for a deep depression, although no objective economic history from 1920 to 1932 can possibly fix such responsibility on him.

The Taft-Hartley Law, passed in 1947 by the 80th Congress, was a measure to replace the Wagner Law, which had been prepared by Lee Pressman, who has since confessed that he had been a member of the Communist Party. At the moment of the passage of the Act, a committee of Congress was appointed to watch its operations and to propose such amendments and changes as might become necessary.

President Truman vetoed the Act and it was passed over his veto by Congress, Democrats as well as Republicans overriding him. This incensed the Little Man, who has refused to employ many of its provisions and who has renamed it, "The Slave Labor Act," which is a cheap trick of a vindictive mind.

The C.I.O., which has prospered during the existence of the Taft-Hartley Law, is violently opposed to it. The C.I.O. wants no law or a reversion of the Wagner Act as prepared by Pressman when he was the C.I.O.'s lawyer.

Now, along comes Adlai Stevenson, who proposes the rewriting of the Taft-Hartley Law. He does not go along with Harry Truman. He says:

"I don't say that everything in the Taft-Hartley Act is wrong, it isn't. And moreover, I'll say frankly that I don't think it's a slave labor law, either. But I do say that it was biased and politically inspired and has not improved labor relations in a single plant.

"We must have a new law and my conclusion is that we can best remedy the defects in the old law by scrapping it and starting over again. What should be retained from the old law can best be written into the new law after the political symbolism of the Taft-Hartley Act is behind us."

No one can object to the amendment of any law on the statute books. It is done every day when Congress is in session. But note what Stevenson really says in those two paragraphs: he wants to scrap the Taft-Hartley Law because it has become a bad symbol.

He says, in five points, how he would rewrite the law:

Point 1. He advocates the universal closed shop;

Point 2. He advocates union responsibility much as it is written in the Taft-Hartley Law with a bit of FEPC thrown in. With regard to the Taft-Hartley Law's provisions against unfair practices by unions, he says:

"Yet I think it is only common sense to acknowledge that we must forbid such practices as jurisdictional strikes, and strikes or boycotts attempting to force an employer to deal with one union when another has been certified as the representative of his employes."

So, Point 3. He advocates outlawing unfair bargaining practices by unions or employes.

Point 4. He rejects the labor injunction; that is, he reduces all labor-management relations to a function of the executive branch of the government without judicial review. This is Fascism.

Point 5. Here Adlai Stevenson gets stuck. He is required to make a constructive suggestion, but this is what he says:

"I have no miracle-drug solution for this problem. I am clear, though, that where the government must intervene in these private disputes, its purpose must be not just to stop the strike, but to see that the dispute gets settled.

"I am clear, too, that the new law must recognize that these emergency cases are always different. It's a proven mistake for Congress to prescribe in advance the same old patent medicine for all of them."

Mr. Stevenson is a lawyer. He is presently the governor of a state and has to sign or veto legislation dealing with a vast number of subjects. Few of the laws passed fit every imaginable case, even laws concerning murder, rape and burglary. That is why offenders are brought into courts to be tried by a judge and jury, where they can be defended by counsel in the presence of the public and press. That is why under our concept of human values, acts of legislation are subject to judicial review.

Mr. Stevenson knows that.

That Body of Yours

By JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

A DRUG TO RELIEVE ANXIETY

In a world that has been upset before, during and after World War 2, physicians, old and young, and the public generally, are seeking drugs that will give relief in pain and anxiety without serious side effects and that will not be habit-forming.

Many individuals are so upset mentally and emotionally that it is causing disturbances of the body and they seek the physician's help for some body symptoms. To relieve the body symptoms, treatment of the mental and emotional symptoms must come first.

In Journal of Mental Science, London, Dr. S. Smith reports seventeen patients, 12 women and five men, who had a combination of psychological indications of anxiety and tension and somatic (body) symptoms such as sweating, tremor, and palpitation of the heart. All these symptoms had received treatment from psychologists and psychiatrists before treatment with hexamethonium. The effect of hexamethonium was determined by the effect of the drug upon the sympatheticotonic (contraction or tightening of sympathetic nervous system) signs and symptoms.

Four of the group were treated in hospital and the remainder as outpatients. Each patient took one tablet (0.25 Gm.) after meals twice a day for five days, then three times a day for another five days and so on up to four or five tablets every day. It was found that the best objective results were usually obtained between the 6th and 10th week of such treatment.

Where there was a history of a heart stroke (corinary thrombosis) or a brain stroke (apoplexy), hexamethonium was not given. High blood pressure—the usual reason for use of hexamethonium—was lowered in 11 cases. Varying degrees of improvement were seen in all patients. Excellent results were obtained in some by removing body disturbances (tremor, sweating, palpitation) which in turn were causing the patient much anxiety. Anxiety is chronic fear. The side effects of the drug were very slight.

While most physicians dislike prescribing drugs just to relieve pain or fears, there are times when it becomes necessary and this drug gave very satisfactory results.

How Is Your Blood Pressure?

Is it high? Is it low? Do you know what precautions to take in either case? Read Dr. Barton's interesting booklet entitled "How Is Your Blood Pressure?" which may be obtained by sending 25 cents to cover cost of handling and mailing, to The Bell Syndicate, Inc., in care of The Kingston Daily Freeman, Post Office Box 99, Station G, New York 19, N. The Champ

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON

Washington — Ex-Gov. Harold Stassen is serving as Ike's secret ambassador to labor and did a Herculean job of trying to appease top union leaders before the general's A. F. of L. speech—to no avail.

Stassen, who also wrote Ike's AFL speech, first had a talk with President Bill Green, urging that the AFL not take a definite stand in favor of Stevenson. Green gave him no encouragement. Stassen also talked to Richard Gray, head of the AFL building and construction trades who had been a strong Eisenhower supporter but later switched to Stevenson. Likewise he talked several times to George Meany, AFL secretary.

Stassen's first talk with Meany was around Labor Day, at which time the ex-governor of Minnesota, now president of the University of Pennsylvania, told him in brief:

"The general is thinking very seriously about Taft-Hartley, and it might be he would come out for repeal. If so, of course, it would increase defections from the Taft wing of the party, and we would have to do something to make up for it."

What Stassen wanted was that the AFL either give Ike some tacit support or else hold off endorsing Stevenson. However, Meany made no commitment.

"The general should do what he thinks best, and we should do what we think is best," he said, in brief.

Persistent Stassen

Stassen, however, approached Meany a second time on Sept. 4, again urged that the AFL hold off regarding Stevenson. But Meany refused to trade.

"It's something the general should decide on the merits," he said, "and it's something we also should decide on the merits."

Not satisfied, Stassen came back again. The last time he saw Meany was on Sunday, Sept. 14, one day before the AFL convention was to meet, when he urged that Eisenhower have the privilege of meeting with the executive council of the AFL before he addressed the convention. At this time Ike would let them look at the text of his address and make any changes before he delivered it to the delegates.

This also was turned down. Meany and other leaders took the position that AFL delegates should be free to discuss and vote their own political ideas without any tacit direction from the executive council.

Any advance perusal or correction of Eisenhower's speech, it was felt, carried implied approval, and might prejudice the freedom of the convention.

Finally Stassen came back with an invitation to the top labor leaders to lunch with Eisenhower after finishing his speech. This, they felt, implied no pledge of support and was accepted.

Adroit Louey Johnson

Ex-Secretary of Defense Louey Johnson, who performed money-raising miracles for the Democrats in 1948, has been sounded out by the Republicans to raise funds for the GOP ticket this year.

The irony is that Johnson got the key to his 1948 contributors from two Republicans. Johnson was on good terms privately with Sinclair Weeks, the GOP finance chairman, and Sen. Styles Bridges of New Hampshire. From there, he wangled the Republicans' secret list of contributors.

Then Johnson made the rounds and hit up each Republican for a Democratic contribution too, arguing that it was safer to place money on both sides. The implication was that if the Democrats remained in power they might remember the big firms that contributed to the GOP only.

Note—the Democrats also are trying to bring Johnson into the 1952 campaign as a member of a Veterans-for-Stevenson braintrust. So far, the ex-secretary of defense has told both parties that he will have to check with his doctor first.

Real-Estate Lobby

The powerful real-estate lobby, which Washington's Sen. Harry Cain has served so faithfully, is now going to bat to get their friend and servant re-elected. One scheme the real-estate boys have hit upon to fill his campaign chest is the old chain-letter gag, this one asking for one-dollar contributions.

This column has obtained a copy of a confidential letter to apartment operators, outlining the scheme. The letter is signed by Donald Haas and C. A. Nicholson, who run the Apartment Owners' Association in Washington state.

"Senator Cain has consistently voted against federal rent control, public housing and other controls over real property," the letter points out approvingly. "He is opposed to federal ownership of tidelands, and a firm opponent of government deficit financing. . . .

"We who believe in the principles of freedom of property rights, operation of the free and private enterprise system and a balanced budget in government, cannot afford to stand by while Senator Cain is attacked," the letter continues. "A plan has been devised whereby financial support can be given to Senator Cain's campaign. And all it will cost you is $1.00 plus postage for six letters, plus postage for six letters, plus a few minutes of your time."

The letter then outlines the chain-letter plan, concluding that, "a chain of letters sweeping across the country can re-elect our friend."

Note—The post office has ruled that chain letters are illegal, though this may not apply if the money is intended as campaign contributions.

Kefauver's Friends Penalized

Senator Kefauver's former campaign staff has been hit by another casualty. Right after the Chicago convention, two of his boosters — Downey Rice and George Martin—were quietly fired from Sen. Lyndon Johnson's preparedness committee. Lyndon has long been jealous of Estes.

Now Kefauver's ex-campaign manager, Gael Sullivan, has lost his job.

He was notified that his contract would not be renewed with the Motion Pictures Association. Knowing this, he beat them to the gun and resigned.

Do You Remember

By SOPHIE MILLER

I am astounded by the wonderful government set up going back a century or so in this locality. Right now before me are the "By-laws of the Fire Deparment of the Village of Rondout, adopted June 22, 1858." It was printed in Rondout by J. H. Gildersleeve, printer. The book is from Irving Scott's collection and like other items given me by the family is in perfect condition. Their "Order of Business" some 96 years ago went along the same line as we have today. It started off with roll call, minutes of preceding meeting, reports of standing committee and the selection of committees etc. It is interesting to learn the names of some of the first trustees, some of whom were: Donald McMillan, James G. Tubby, Palmer A. Canfield, Jacob Derrenbacher and George B. Hibbard. James G. Tubby was first president.

Mr. Scott, or his family also collected various tickets. There is one of the Amity Council, Private Soiree, at Washington Hall, Monday, evening, December 27, 1875. Tickets, admitting gentlemen and ladies, $1. Music by Goeller's Orchestra. Another interesting one dated December 16, 1862 is printed thus on top..Mr.....and Lady." The ladies' names to be filled in. It was also a Private Social Soiree, at Washington Hall to start at 7 and winding up at 1 or 2 p. m. It definitely states on the ticket, gentleman without ladies not admitted. The committee listed were J. DuBois, Jr., Wm. B. Scott and C. Lowerhouse. There are several others which I will describe another time.

In the good old days of February 20, 1884, The Kingston Daily Freeman gave the program of the Kingston Academy exercises which were held at Academy Hall. Perhaps some readers remember these students in later life. Mamie Williamson gave a recitation called "Saxon Grit." Belle B. Myers read "Papa's Letter." Nellie Shaffer read an essay called "What Shall We Read?" Arthur C. Connelly gave a declamation called "Cicero vs. Catiline." A piano duet was played by Helen E. Osborn, and Florence L. Humphrey called "Midsummer's Night Dream." Anna L. Blauvelt gave the "Story of Evangeline." Sadie E. Schutt recited "The First Settlers Story." "A Second Trial" was read by Clara D. Norton. Claude Odell gave a "Modern Sermon." "The Brooklyn Bridge" in essay form was read by Myra E. Bush. The Polish Boy was read by Lizzie D. Roosa and a piano and violin composition was played by James Van Buren and Arthur C. Connelly. The above names all seem familar to me.

Solomon Vogel of 86 Abeel street, Rondout, N. Y. back in 1884 was advertising as the importer of Canada West Horses, "good farm draft and driving horses always at hand and now at reduced prices.

There is a will of a lady of the town of Saugerties, which was proved and admitted to probate, date of will July 7, 1883. It gave to another lady, one feather bed, one bedstead, two pillows, one bolster, three sheets, one table, table cloth, two pair of pillow cases, six silver teaspoons and the kitchen table. No doubt an interesting story goes with such a will.

Both girls and boys' gym classes meet at the auditorium on alternate days. Snack lunches are served to students during both the fifth and sixth periods by Mrs. Hazel Townsend. No estimate of time has been given when the new project will be ready for occupancy.

Jap Prime Minister Sure Russia Won't Fight

Tokyo, Sept. 20 (AP)—Tokyo newspapers quoted Prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida today as saying "'I am sure that America and Soviet Russia will not fight."

He made the statement in a campaign speech in his home district on Shikoku Island, the newspapers said.

"I say this on the basis of the fact that American industry is based on free competition while Soviet industry is controlled by the state," Hoshida added. "There is no comparison between competitive industry and controlled industry. How can an industrially strong power fight with an industrially weak power? This just doesn't happen."

Try Uniform Display

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—Police patrolmen and sergeants wore their uniforms to and from work today in an effort to discourage crime. The new move, ordered yesterday by Police Commissioner George P. Monaghan, places in public view a uniformed complement of 14,759 patrolmen and 1,903 sergeants just before and after shift changes. Monaghan said he hoped the additional uniforms will help frighten off potential rapists and muggers. A recent increase in crime brought on the move. Such a plan has been tried twice before—during a crime wave in 1923 and during a shortage of patrolmen in World War 2.

Now Eisenhower Can Vote for His Father

Yonkers, N. Y., Sept. 20—When Maj. John Eisenhower left for Korea several weeks ago, he told newsmen he wouldn't be able to vote for his father for president because he would be out of the country.

A Yonkers attorney, Maurice S. Degenstein, member of the Yonkers Republican City Committee, read young Eisenhower's comment and decided to do something about it.

He wrote Major Eisenhower's wife at Highland Falls, N. Y., and told her the soldier could vote with a war ballot if he met certain conditions of residence.

Yesterday Degenstein announced that Eisenhower had applied for the ballot and could vote. And, the lawyer said, he had received a note of gratitude from Eisenhower's father, the Republican nominee for president.

No Heart Ailment

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—A government attorney says Henry W. Grunewald, the "silent witness" of the congressional tax probes, has been found free of a heart ailment. Grunewald had complained of such an illness. Assistant U. S. Attorney George Percy said yesterday that Grunewald voluntarily had agreed to an examination by a government-appointed physician, Dr. George H. Roberts. And, Percy said, Roberts reported "no evidence at this time of any type of heart disease." Percy made the announcement as Grunewald testified for the fourth time before a Brooklyn grand jury probing tax frauds.

Held for Supplying Drugs to Prison

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—Anthony Cerasani, 41, and Joseph Wren, 52, were arrested yesterday and booked in connection with illegally supplying narcotics to four Rikers island inmates.

Narcotics squad detectives, who made the arrests following 40 hours of continuous investigation at the city prison, said the men employed a "very clever scheme" involving the use of envelopes which had double backs, with the pocket between the backs being used as containers for drugs.

The men were booked on charges of conspiracy and selling and possession of narcotics and were scheduled to appear in Felony Court today.

Warrants also were issued for four Rikers island inmates. As soon as these men complete their current terms, police said, they will be re-arrested on charges of conspiracy and possession of narcotics. The four inmates are: William Peebles, 58, due to complete a 30-day sentence for disorderly conduct today; Jack Greenberg, 35, serving a six-month sentence, due to be completed September 24, for possession of narcotics; Walter Juzwiak, 36, serving an indefinite term for selling narcotics, and Anthony La Rocca, 57, now serving a one-year term for selling narcotics.

Police said that Peebles will be picked up today when he is released from Rikers island and will be taken to the Bronx for booking. They explained that Rikers island falls within Bronx county. Peebles did not use drugs, police said, but obtained them for other inmates.

Civil Service to Meet

The regular meeting of the Civil Service Employes' Association will be held Monday, Sept. 22, at 8 p. m. in City Court rooms. Election of officers will take place. All members are requested to attend.

Which way

do you look at things?

WHETHER YOU SEE EYE-TO-EYE with Adlai or Ike, one thing is certain:

From now till November 4th, you'll want to know how they look at all the big issues . . . .

Europe . . . Korea . . . taxes . . . controls . . . income . . . all the problems that reach into your daily life here in our town.

And to help you weigh each candidate day by day as each issue comes to light—you turn to your newspaper. Just as you've turned to it daily for dozens of other reasons since you first learned to read.

For the latest facts . . . for goings-on in our town, our state, our entire world . . . to see what's for fun and what's for sale. Not only what—but where and when and how much it costs.

And in the newspaper we read all about it . . . or only as much as we want . . . as many times as we want. We read any time we choose . . . any place we choose.

That's why nearly everybody reads the newspaper nearly every day.

That's why so many people who sell advertised products insist that they be advertised in newspapers.

Because in newspapers an advertising message has a chance to reach all people who can buy. Not just sports fans or quiz fans or music fans or comedy fans . . . but everybody.

That's why all advertisers—both "national" and retail—invest more money in newspapers than in any other form of advertising.

The newspaper is first with the most news . . . first with the most people . . . first with the most advertisers.

The newspaper is always "first with the most"

Kingston High School News

(Items in this column have been written by journalism students.)

Six changes in faculty have taken place at Kingston High School this fall, including three arrivals and three departures. Miss Adaline DeCarlo and Gerald J. Chabot are new to Kingston High, while William Hurley returns to his duties after a 17-month stint with the Medical Corps in Japan.

Miss DeCarlo, business instructor, brings both teaching and business experience to her new position. She comes to Kingston from a secretarial job in Weston Electric Instrument Corporation in Newark, N. J. Previously, Miss DeCarlo, a graduate of New York State Teachers College in Albany, taught at various high schools in the state.

Mr. Chabot, also a teacher in the business department, is a graduate of Bryant College in Providence, R. I. He also has completed a masters degree at Syracuse University. Mr. Chabot previously taught at Michaels High School in Michaels. Miss DeCarlo replaces Miss Ethel Carlson who resigned in August to teach at Alden. Mr. Chabot is taking the position previously held by Victor Dankevich.

Senior Play Tryouts

Tryouts for the annual Senior Play, And Then Came Spring, were held Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday in the high school auditorium under the direction of Miss Madeleine Tarrant who listened to about 40 senior boys and girls recite various parts from the play. From this group a cast of 17 will be selected in the near future including nine boys and seven girls.

Fisters Honored

Members of the Kingston High School faculty held a surprise tea Thursday for Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Fister who will leave Oct. 1 for Tucson, Ariz., where they will make their temporary home.

Mr. Fister who has been granted a year's leave of absence by the Board of Education has taught mathematics at Kingston High School for nearly 20 years.

In 1950 Mr. Fister spent a year as an exchange teacher in the schools at Salt Lake City. Mrs. Fister has also done substitute work for the social studies teachers at KHS.

New Marshals

Marshals have been selected at Kingston High for the coming year. The work of this group assures efficient passing of the student body through the corridors. They also are on constant duty during the lunch periods to maintain order. William Limbacker acts as faculty advisor for the group.

Chorus Tryouts

Approximately 200 high school students reported to Miss Erika Krein for tryouts for the school chorus which was organized last week with 100 chosen as members of the group.

Chorus consists of about 50 boys who make up the bass and tenor section and about 60 girls who make up the alto and soprano section.

Once a week the group meets in separate sessions, then all work together for a second session of study in the auditorium. Also the entire chorus will work with the choir on special occasions.

Maroon Photographers

Mrs. Partlan reports that six boys and a girl have turned out for the job of Maroon photographer and are now taking lessons for the proper use of the camera to determine who will hold the position. There are still jobs open for work on the 1953 Maroon and any interested student may register in Room 110.

AA, Paper Drives

Membership drives for both the AA and Dame Rumor, headed by Raymond Woodard and Miss Agnes Smith respectively, are now underway. The AA drive, running about the same as other years, has about 600 members. The AA drive will end this week while Dame Rumor, with 800 members, will run until the latter part of next week. The first issue of Dame Rumor will be out Oct. 2.

Official Visits KHS

Kingston High School was honored Tuesday by a visit from Howard L. Bowen, deputy commissioner of education for the state of Maine.

Mr. Bowen is especially interested in the core curriculum, and believes this shows a definite advancement in education. He also mentioned that the spirit of friendliness among students and teachers in Kingston High is a great asset to learning.

After his visit to Kingston, Mr. Bowen was to attend the National Citizen's Commission meeting at Washington, D. C.

Coed Homerooms

Boys and girls are roll calling in the same rooms for the first time in approximately 30 years. There are several exceptions to these coed rooms which have been made in order to accommodate such groups as shop, homemaking and clerical students. Students generally express approval of the new plan.

Seek New Nominees

With the resignation of Joseph Stine as senior class president, the seniors have been holding a number of special meetings for nomination of presidential candidates.

Nominees are Louis Perry, Ken Kouhoupt, Joe Gardiner, John Hickey, John Steenberg, Richard Constant, Glenn Edinger and Don Kiwus.

Elections will be held as soon as voting machines have been acquired from the city.

Work Continues

Construction work on the new field house adjacent to the high school continues. Meanwhile, the municipal auditorium on Broadway is serving as temporary annex for the high school. Both girls and boys' gym classes meet at the auditorium on alternate days. Snack lunches are served to students during both the fifth and sixth periods by Mrs. Hazel Townsend. No estimate of time has been given when the new project will be ready for occupancy.

Jap Prime Minister Sure Russia Won't Fight

Tokyo, Sept. 20 (AP)—Tokyo newspapers quoted Prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida today as saying "'I am sure that America and Soviet Russia will not fight."

He made the statement in a campaign speech in his home district on Shikoku Island, the newspapers said.

"I say this on the basis of the fact that American industry is based on free competition while Soviet industry is controlled by the state," Hoshida added. "There is no comparison between competitive industry and controlled industry. How can an industrially strong power fight with an industrially weak power? This just doesn't happen."

Try Uniform Display

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—Police patrolmen and sergeants wore their uniforms to and from work today in an effort to discourage crime. The new move, ordered yesterday by Police Commissioner George P. Monaghan, places in public view a uniformed complement of 14,759 patrolmen and 1,903 sergeants just before and after shift changes. Monaghan said he hoped the additional uniforms will help frighten off potential rapists and muggers. A recent increase in crime brought on the move. Such a plan has been tried twice before—during a crime wave in 1923 and during a shortage of patrolmen in World War 2.

Now Eisenhower Can Vote for His Father

Yonkers, N. Y., Sept. 20—When Maj. John Eisenhower left for Korea several weeks ago, he told newsmen he wouldn't be able to vote for his father for president because he would be out of the country.

A Yonkers attorney, Maurice S. Degenstein, member of the Yonkers Republican City Committee, read young Eisenhower's comment and decided to do something about it.

He wrote Major Eisenhower's wife at Highland Falls, N. Y., and told her the soldier could vote with a war ballot if he met certain conditions of residence.

Yesterday Degenstein announced that Eisenhower had applied for the ballot and could vote. And, the lawyer said, he had received a note of gratitude from Eisenhower's father, the Republican nominee for president.

No Heart Ailment

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—A government attorney says Henry W. Grunewald, the "silent witness" of the congressional tax probes, has been found free of a heart ailment. Grunewald had complained of such an illness. Assistant U. S. Attorney George Percy said yesterday that Grunewald voluntarily had agreed to an examination by a government-appointed physician, Dr. George H. Roberts. And, Percy said, Roberts reported "no evidence at this time of any type of heart disease." Percy made the announcement as Grunewald testified for the fourth time before a Brooklyn grand jury probing tax frauds.

Held for Supplying Drugs to Prison

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—Anthony Cerasani, 41, and Joseph Wren, 52, were arrested yesterday and booked in connection with illegally supplying narcotics to four Rikers island inmates.

Narcotics squad detectives, who made the arrests following 40 hours of continuous investigation at the city prison, said the men employed a "very clever scheme" involving the use of envelopes which had double backs, with the pocket between the backs being used as containers for drugs.

The men were booked on charges of conspiracy and selling and possession of narcotics and were scheduled to appear in Felony Court today.

Warrants also were issued for four Rikers island inmates. As soon as these men complete their current terms, police said, they will be re-arrested on charges of conspiracy and possession of narcotics. The four inmates are: William Peebles, 58, due to complete a 30-day sentence for disorderly conduct today; Jack Greenberg, 35, serving a six-month sentence, due to be completed September 24, for possession of narcotics; Walter Juzwiak, 36, serving an indefinite term for selling narcotics, and Anthony La Rocca, 57, now serving a one-year term for selling narcotics.

Police said that Peebles will be picked up today when he is released from Rikers island and will be taken to the Bronx for booking. They explained that Rikers island falls within Bronx county. Peebles did not use drugs, police said, but obtained them for other inmates.

Tito's New Wife at Reception for Eden

Mrs. Jovanka Tito smiles as Marshal Tito (right), Yugoslavia's chief of state, passes cigarets to Britain's Foreign Secretary, Anthony Eden, at a reception honoring Eden in Belgrade, Sept. 18. The reception marked the first appearance of the new First Lady of Yugoslavia at a formal function. The new Mrs. Tito is a 28-year-old brunette of Serbian origin who served as a Partisan fighter at the age of 17. Tito is 60 years of age. (AP Wirephoto via radio from Frankfurt).

Paris Heads

Exciting Hats Reveal Hairline

Paris picks, for Fall and Winter, the hat that reveals the hairline. Small felt in wine-red (upper left) has asymetric line, is a Marie Christiane design. Paulette combines black velvet and gray velvet and gray jersey (upper right) for an afternoon hat that's softly draped. A shallow black velvet crown is cut in a point and clipped with a diamond-studded medallion. Little blue velvet hat by Gilbert Orcel (lower left) has embroidered motif in paillettes. Claude St. Cyr does a toque in gray velvet (lower right) and trims it with "tam-tam" yellow velvet leaves.—By Rosette Hargrove, NEA Staff Correspondent.

Glamorous Gowns Spark Season

The youthful Serge Kogan likes the contrast of rich white acetate lace (left) with bouffant tulle. The "decolletage jacket" in black acetate taffeta covers just the shoulders. Supple, flowing lines characterize this ball gown (center) in absinthe green acetate satin by Christian Dior. Over the shoulders, there's a fringed stole in deeper-toned green. Jean Desses' Hawaii-inspired lei theme appears in this ball gown (right) of palest raspberry satin. The luminous color is reflected in the deep raspberry of the long velvet gloves, the necklace and earrings. By Rosette Hargrove, NEA Staff Correspondent.

SHOKAN

Shokan, Sept. 19—Mr. and Mrs. Edward Adsit of Neversink attended the two-day meeting here Wednesday. They were accompanied by Mrs. Asa Barringer, formerly of the Samsonville road, who now makes her home in the house of Mrs. Ward Beesmer opposite the Olive Bridge Church. Mrs. Adsit, who is the former Bertha Beesmer of the old village of Olive City, has an antique shop in the Neversink area.

Callers in the hub of the reservoir county Tuesday included Benjamin Schecter, a Kingston city water commissioner.

Herbert Wells whose marriage, Sept. 14, to Helene M. Carlzon was chronicled in The Freeman social columns Tuesday, is well-known in Shokan where he resided for a time. He is a grandson of Mrs. Joseph Constable of this village.

Preachers at the three sessions of the Old School Baptist meeting Wednesday included: Elder Everett C. Jones of North Carolina; Elder W. J. Berry, editor of "The Old Faith Contender," and Elder J. D. Wood of Virginia who is editor of that grand old periodical of the sect, the "Signs of the Times," favorite religious reading matter in hundreds of homes in the long ago. Yellowed copies of The Signs still are discovered in the attics of farmhouses and village homes throughout the Catskills. The Dutch Reformed had its Christian Intelligencer, the Methodists their Christian Herald, but it is doubtful if either publication was read, studied and enjoyed as much as the Signs of the Times, standby of the Old School Baptists.

John Henville returned to the now closed Camp High Point after having been in the city a few days. He expects to resume his studies at New York University where he is a member of the sophomore class. John, a former Kingston boy, was a member of the KHS football and track teams three years ago.

Having a birthday Sept. 23 is Lester S. Davis, West Shokan businessman who was born at Krumville, a son of Stephen and Katie Davis. He married Edna Nichols and they have a son, Carl Stephen.

Soft Lines Fall News

By GAILE DUGAS, NEA Woman's Editor

New York — (NEA) — The stress placed upon softer lines in fall fashions means, of course, that there's a new softness in fabrics.

To interpret the softer silhouette, designers have turned to softer fabrics. Thus, we'll see much of the chiffon woolens, either woven or knit. This includes chiffon tweed, since tweed is always with us in some form, come autumn.

Similarly, tweed is developed in the fluid, readily molded fabric called tweed jersey. Such tweeds are equally at home in town or country, are readily teamed with the sophistication of black velvet or black suede.

Dress in tweed jersey (left) by Eisenberg has full, gathered skirt with slot hip pockets. There's a dolman cut for the sleeves, which are cuffed in the black velvet used for the vestee and the roll collar with deep V neckline. Wide belt is in velvet, too.

Chiffon tweed is used (right) by this same designer for a dress that buttons down the front. Dolman sleeves end just below the elbow. Soft fullness is achieved through two loose panels with slash pockets that begin at the neckline, are belted in by black suede, and fly out from the waistline.

The Mature Parent

Dominating Parents Keep Their Children in a Cage

By MURIEL LAWRENCE

Last June, Julie graduated from the eighth grade. For the occasion, she wore a white organdie dress made by herself under the supervision of her sewing teacher.

After wearing it again once or twice, Julie decided to launder it herself. With money from her allowance, she bought a box of soap flakes. It carried specific instructions on how to wash organdie and after reading them carefully, Julie went into the bathroom and mixed tepid water with her flakes. When the lather was properly foamy, she plunged her dress into the bowl.

She was squeezing suds gently through it when her mother came in with clean towels. Realizing what Julie was doing, she put down the towels and pushed her away from the bowl. "That's not the way to wash that dress!" she exclaimed, snatching the wet garment from her child. "Get away now and let me do this. . . ."

When Julie's mother was finished washing the dress, she wrung it out and shook its folds free. "There, now go and hang it on . . ." she had begun to say when she noted the sullen look on her daughter's face. Julie's mother flushed very red, threw the wet dress back into the bowl. "Go ahead—ruin your dress if you like! I don't know why I ever do things for you. I never get any thanks for it.

Now between you and me, Julie's mother doesn't rate any thanks. First, in the guise of being "helpful," she has snatched her child's sense of competence from her to exalt her own. Then she has condemned her child for resisting this aggressiveness.

Julie is often sullen and defiant toward her mother. This is because her 13-year-old attempts to collect some respect for herself are constantly frustrated by demands for gratitude in return for services she does not want.

The little scene enacted between Julie and her mother is played out in the homes of our country a thousand times a day between children and parents who use their "natural" interest in their children to smother their initiative in the name of "helpfulness."

If we have developed a habit of shoving Bill or Alice away from the tool bench or ironing board every time they attempt to help themselves, our "helpfulness" may be the camouflage by which we hide from ourselves our intention to keep them weak and dependent.

In his book, "Escape From Freedom," Dr. Erich Froman has this to say: "The dominator bribes with material things, with praise, assurances of love . . . or by showing concern. He may give everything—everything except one thing: the right to be free and independent. The child is put in a golden cage, it can have everything provided it does not want to leave the cage."

Dominating people subsist on the gratitude of others. They tend to lay great stress on the physical gifts they make, and so materialism is their hall mark.

When children's dignity and prestige is our first consideration, we do not have to concern ourselves with their gratitude. It flows from them spontaneously like water from a spring. When we give them the right to be right when they are right, trust pours from them effortlessly.

New Paltz Orchestra To Resume Rehearsals

The New Paltz College-Community Symphony Orchestra will begin its season of fall activities on Tuesday, Sept. 23, at 7:15 p. m. in the music room at the State University Teachers College. At that time the first rehearsal of the group will take place under the direction of its leader, O. Lincoln Igou, of the college music faculty.

Begin 7th Year

This fall marks the beginning of the seventh year of a new period of expansion of the orchestra and its activities following the end of the war. That date also coincides with the arrival of Mr. Igou on the New Paltz campus. Each year this organization of students and older residents of nearby communities presents several programs of varied but serious music, finally bringing its season to a close with the performance of a major composition for chorus and orchestra.

Plans for the coming year will follow the same general pattern of concerts, according to Mr. Igou with enough variety being built into each program to provide interest for listeners with a wide range of differing musical backgrounds. Each concert will feature a soloist who will appear both with the orchestra and in a group of special solo numbers.

Need Musicians

New members are always being sought to supplement the present organization. String players are never available in sufficient numbers for amateur orchestras, and there is always room for a conscientious musician in other sections as well. Musicians travel from homes in many different centers to rehearse weekly on Tuesdays from 7:15 to 10 p. m. Members represent the communities of Kingston, Highland, West Shokan, Poughkeepsie, Lake Katrine, Hurley, Port Ewen, Ellenville, and New Paltz. Any interested persons are invited to come with instruments to the September 23 rehearsal.

GOOD TASTE TODAY

By EMILY POST

(Author of 'Etiquette,' 'Children Are People,' etc.)

EMPTINESS LACKS HOSPITALITY

A reader asks: "Will you please tell me why you disapprove of keeping a silver tea set in the living room when not in use? When I was married a few months ago I received a very beautiful silver tea set and it seems a shame to keep it in the closet and not out where I and my guests can enjoy its beauty."

If you want your friends to see it, serve tea in it by all means. But an empty tea set is just as out of place in the living room as hanging your clothes there.

No Matter Which

Dear Mrs. Post: The following question came up in our home economics class the other day and we wish you would give us the correct answer. Who is supposed to say "how do you do" first when introducing a young person to an older one. For example: When Mary Smith introduces a classmate to her mother is the mother supposed to say "how do you do" first or vice versa?

Answer: The older person usually does, but there is no impropriety in the younger saying it first—or as no answer is expected both often say it together.

Wedding Gift to Bridegroom

Dear Mrs. Post: The son of a friend of mine is being married and I would like to give a check for a wedding present. I have never met the bride. To whom should the check be made payable?

Answer: Although all presents are correctly sent to the bride, in your personal situation a check to the bridegroom would be entirely proper.

Showing Engagement Ring

Dear Mrs. Post: I have received my engagement ring recently. May I show it to my friends of my own accord, or should I wait for them to ask to see it? It is a very beautiful ring and I don't want to seem boastful.

Answer: I am sure your friends will clamor to see it. But there is no impropriety in your exclaiming, "Have you seen my lovely ring?"

Paper Wrappings

Dear Mrs. Post: You will probably think this a silly question, but I have often wondered about it. How does one dispose of the paper wrappings from lump sugar in a restaurant?

Answer: You lay it on the table beside the plate or, if you have finished the course, on your plate.

Are you planning to serve a dinner party alone? Mrs. Post's booklet No. 503 explains how to serve in the simplest manner. Mrs. Post is sorry she cannot answer personal mail. To obtain a copy send 25 cents in coin to her, c/o The Kingston Daily Freeman, P. O. Box 99, Station G, New York 19, N. Y.

Now between you and me, Julie's mother doesn't rate any thanks. First, in the guise of being "helpful," she has snatched her child's sense of competence from her to exalt her own. Then she has condemned her child for resisting this aggressiveness.

Julie is often sullen and defiant toward her mother. This is because her 13-year-old attempts to collect some respect for herself are constantly frustrated by demands for gratitude in return for services she does not want.

The little scene enacted between Julie and her mother is played out in the homes of our country a thousand times a day between children and parents who use their "natural" interest in their children to smother their initiative in the name of "helpfulness."

If we have developed a habit of shoving Bill or Alice away from the tool bench or ironing board every time they attempt to help themselves, our "helpfulness" may be the camouflage by which we hide from ourselves our intention to keep them weak and dependent.

In his book, "Escape From Freedom," Dr. Erich Froman has this to say: "The dominator bribes with material things, with praise, assurances of love . . . or by showing concern. He may give everything—everything except one thing: the right to be free and independent. The child is put in a golden cage, it can have everything provided it does not want to leave the cage."

Dominating people subsist on the gratitude of others. They tend to lay great stress on the physical gifts they make, and so materialism is their hall mark.

When children's dignity and prestige is our first consideration, we do not have to concern ourselves with their gratitude. It flows from them spontaneously like water from a spring. When we give them the right to be right when they are right, trust pours from them effortlessly.

New Paltz Orchestra To Resume Rehearsals

The New Paltz College-Community Symphony Orchestra will begin its season of fall activities on Tuesday, Sept. 23, at 7:15 p. m. in the music room at the State University Teachers College. At that time the first rehearsal of the group will take place under the direction of its leader, O. Lincoln Igou, of the college music faculty.

Begin 7th Year

This fall marks the beginning of the seventh year of a new period of expansion of the orchestra and its activities following the end of the war. That date also coincides with the arrival of Mr. Igou on the New Paltz campus. Each year this organization of students and older residents of nearby communities presents several programs of varied but serious music, finally bringing its season to a close with the performance of a major composition for chorus and orchestra.

Plans for the coming year will follow the same general pattern of concerts, according to Mr. Igou with enough variety being built into each program to provide interest for listeners with a wide range of differing musical backgrounds. Each concert will feature a soloist who will appear both with the orchestra and in a group of special solo numbers.

Need Musicians

New members are always being sought to supplement the present organization. String players are never available in sufficient numbers for amateur orchestras, and there is always room for a conscientious musician in other sections as well. Musicians travel from homes in many different centers to rehearse weekly on Tuesdays from 7:15 to 10 p. m. Members represent the communities of Kingston, Highland, West Shokan, Poughkeepsie, Lake Katrine, Hurley, Port Ewen, Ellenville, and New Paltz. Any interested persons are invited to come with instruments to the September 23 rehearsal.

GOOD TASTE TODAY

(Author of 'Etiquette, 'Children Are People, etc.)

EMPTINESS LACKS HOSPITALITY

A reader asks: "Will you please tell me why you disapprove of keeping a silver tea set in the living room when not in use? When I was married a few months ago I received a very beautiful silver tea set and it seems a shame to keep it in the closet and not out where I and my guests can enjoy its beauty."

If you want your friends to see it, serve tea in it by all means. But an empty tea set is just as out of place in the living room as hanging your clothes there.

No Matter Which

Dear Mrs. Post: The following question came up in our home economics class the other day and we wish you would give us the correct answer. Who is supposed to say "how do you do" first when introducing a young person to an older one. For example: When Mary Smith introduces a classmate to her mother is the mother supposed to say "how do you do" first or vice versa?

Answer: The older person usually does, but there is no impropriety in the younger saying it first—or as no answer is expected both often say it together.

Wedding Gift to Bridegroom

Dear Mrs. Post: The son of a friend of mine is being married and I would like to give a check for a wedding present. I have never met the bride. To whom should the check be made payable?

Answer: Although all presents are correctly sent to the bride, in your personal situation a check to the bridegroom would be entirely proper.

Showing Engagement Ring

Dear Mrs. Post: I have received my engagement ring recently. May I show it to my friends of my own accord, or should I wait for them to ask to see it? It is a very beautiful ring and I don't want to seem boastful.

Answer: I am sure your friends will clamor to see it. But there is no impropriety in your exclaiming, "Have you seen my lovely ring?"

Paper Wrappings

Dear Mrs. Post: You will probably think this a silly question, but I have often wondered about it. How does one dispose of the paper wrappings from lump sugar in a restaurant?

Answer: You lay it on the table beside the plate or, if you have finished the course, on your plate.

Are you planning to serve a dinner party alone? Mrs. Post's booklet No. 503 explains how to serve in the simplest manner. Mrs. Post is sorry she cannot answer personal mail. To obtain a copy send 25 cents in coin to her, c/o The Kingston Daily Freeman, P. O. Box 99, Station G, New York 19, N. Y.

KHS Opens Football Season Against Mont Pleasant at Stadium Tonight

Carmen Massa, who figures to do a lot of passing, running and kicking tonight at municipal stadium, is shown above flanked by the principal backfield operators for the Maroon—Roger Billings, Pat Manfro, Ed Van Loan and Orville Giles.

Kingston High School's "Junior" football squad opens the 1952 campaign against Mont Pleasant of Schenectady tonight at 8 o'clock.

Game time for the first Saturday arclighter in KHS history is 8 o'clock.

Mont Pleasant, with one of eastern New York's best scholastic backs in Walt Jablonski, is favored to beat the young but speedy KHS eleven.

Coach Bill Burke has not announced a starting lineup but yesterday issued a tentative varsity roster of 17 players.

Bill Engle, who will start at one of the tackles; Carmen Massa, a triple-threat back and Pat Manfro, the only senior on the squad are the principal holdovers from 1951.

Billings at Quarter

Roger Billings will call the plays in the backfield, with Carmen Massa and Orville Giles at the halfbacks and Pat Manfro at fullback. Ed Van Loan and Kenny Kouhoupt are other backfield operators who may see action.

Bill Glennon is listed as a reserve center behind LeFevre and Bill Ritter is available to spell Gallo or Kuntz. Bruce Munson is the tackle alternate and Ronnie Hooper is the No. 3 end.

Little advance information is available on the usually rugged Red Raiders. The Mont Pleasant squad has a new coach and new system and, if anything, figures to be the equal of the team that won last year's opener from Kingston on the Dorpian gridiron.

SPORTS

By CHARLES J. TIANO
Freeman Sports Editor

This is the night Bill Burke unveils the "Split-T" and the 1952 KHS football squad against mighty Mont Pleasant of Schenectady at municipal stadium.

The contest is historically significant for two reasons. It marks the Maroon's first outing under the arcs on a Saturday night but of more than academic interest to rival coaches, Burke's departure from the single-wing attack after years of enormous success.

Burke's mastery of the single-wing whenever he had a fair shake in material earned him the reputation of being the best high school coach in these parts. His decision to scrap the power thrusts of the wing must have been reached reluctantly.

And don't bet he doesn't return to it when the proper material comes along. Meanwhile, let's see what KHS can do with this guy Jablonski tonight.

An ageless creature, the stout-hearted New York Giant fan bobbed up in the person of Supervisor Ken Wilson of Woodstock who was attending a kaffee klatsch of the county Republican committee Tuesday night at Schoentag's.

Despite the proximity of Paul Freer, the rabid Yankee follower, the supervisor told a guy he has been a Giant rooter "since way back."

"I was particularly interested in your comments about Leo Durocher's use of Jack Harshmann as a starter against the Cubs," he said. "It was significant because I know how much of a Yankee rooter you are."

"I have no particular preference in the National League, the other guy replied, "and if I root for the Dodgers just a shade it's because they seem to come up with better World Series accommodations. It could be that Pete Hoffmann and Gary Schumacher give the best seats to real Giant fans first."

Did the supervisor know that in Kingston and surrounding territory the Giant rooters outnumbered the combined total of all other teams . . . Yankees, Dodgers, Cardinals, etc.?

"I never thought of it that way," Wilson replied, "but I always felt that there were quite a few of us around."

The guy could have told the supervisor that real Giant fans are born and they represent the finest breed of sports followers. It's handed down from father to son and flourishes in adversity, lives in eternal hope and is probably the most loyal species in the sports world. This mind you, coming from a guy who has been riding the Yankee bandwagon since the days of Babe Ruth, through Lou Gehrig and Joe DiMaggio and now Mickey Mantle, the greatest star of the coming generation.

The next few moments were devoted to a discussion of Giant pennant chances and you never count the Giants out while the Dodgers flounder a notch ahead of them.

The conversation turned to football and Ken asked a question that is popular in local sports these days:

"How do you think our boy Ed (Weaver) will make out at the Point this year?"

The temptation is to say quickly, "He'll be a big star and bid for the All-America," and then sit back to see what happens. But Weaver's status is in many ways an unusual one.

Although Big Ed has had more actual varsity football experience than any member of the 1952 West Point squad, he is rated as just a "reserve end." But, since you can't escape the fact that Big Ed was heading toward All-America recognition before he left school, you feel he'll make a smashing comeback.

As Wilson put it: "They won't ever find an end with a better pair of hands than Weaver." And the other guy doubted seriously if the Point has a better offense wingman than the former KHS athlete.

Weaver's future at the Point should start to shape itself on Sept. 26 in the seasonal opener against North Carolina. A bigger, stronger boy than the year he was Earl Blaik's No. 1 offensive end, we don't see how Weaver can miss regaining his pristine form.

A reader disputes a recent item that Leroy "Pappy" Wells was the first Kingston outboard motor pilot to complete the Albany-to-New York "Driftwood Derby" run.

"You might be interested to know," said the reader, "that on May 9, 1931, Ben Rhymer finished sixth in a boat named "Sliver" in the Class F division. He finished in 4th position in his particular class. He was the first driver to reach Poughkeepsie in a 1:33:30 clocking for the 70-mile stretch. This was equivalent to better than 46 miles per hour. He ran into difficulty in the lower Hudson area due to poor weather conditions that made visibility nearly zero. The above information can be verified in the June 1931 issue of the Motor Boating magazine."

Okay, Pappy, you're the second.

Little Brown Jug To Meadow Rice

Delaware, O., Sept. 20 (AP)—W. G. Reynolds, the big aluminum and tobacco man from Louisville, Ky., figures he's no longer a jinx to his great three-year-old pacer, Meadow Rice.

Meadow Rice proved it to him yesterday, and handed him a $30,231.66 purse, by winning the seventh annual $60,463.35 "Little Brown Jug" while Reynolds watched from atop the grandstand.

The brown colt, after being shunted to third place—that's as far back as he's been this year in 23 starts—in Thursday's opening heat of the rain-halted "Jug," came back yesterday to take two miles tests in a row to wrap up the laurels.

He did it in world record time for a divided three-heat race, for the time of the three miles totalled 6:06 2/5, more than three seconds under the 6:09 3/5 record set in 1950 when Dudley Hanover triumphed.

Reynolds flew back to Louisville yesterday morning for a business engagement, but was back in Delaware for the second day of the race. After Meadow Rice, sterling son of the widower, came roaring home with the cash, Reynolds said:

"This is my biggest thrill. To tell the truth, I thought I was a jinx to Meadow Rice. I've seen him race 10 times before today, but I've seen him win only once. At least a half-dozen times I've watched him 'photoed' out and I thought it was going to happen again."

Southern Cal in Rose Bowl Future Book Following 35-7 Rout of Washington S.

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—One victory doesn't necessarily assure a trip to the Rose Bowl but Southern California is one up on the other Pacific Coast Conference teams today as college football dents the national sports picture with a goodly sprinkling of major games.

The Trojans from USC rode roughshod over Washington State, 35-7, last night to get the jump on their conference rivals.

Southern Cal led 14-0 at halftime and piled on three more touchdowns in the third period. The winners put together only one sustained march—a 53-yard, 10-play junket — but overwhelmed State via a series of spectacular pass interception runbacks and a 77-yard punt return.

In the other top games under the lights last night, Alabama set a Southeastern Conference record of 12 fumbles but managed to turn back a surprisingly strong Mississippi Southern outfit, 20-6. Another SEC member, Mississippi, opened with a 54-6 romp over Memphis State.

Except in the south and far west most of today's top games have an intersectional hue.

From a nation-wide spectator viewpoint the No. 1 game is at Lawrence, Kans., where the University of Kansas Jayhawks, fortified by the ex-Army star, Gil Reich, play host to Texas Christian, defending Southwest Conference champion. Kansas is the No. 2 pick back of Oklahoma in the Big Seven.

This game is the first of 11 to be telecast nationally under the NCAA's 1952 television program. It is to be carried by NBC-TV and is scheduled to start at 3 p. m., Eastern Standard Time.

Top attractions include Temple at Penn State, Connecticut at Yale.

Good Time Wins

Cleveland, Sept. 20 (AP)—Good Time, top money-winning harness horse of all time, earned $5,000 by winning the $10,000 Parshall Free-For-All pace last night at Grandview Track and raised his earnings to $303,092. The 3-5 favorite won in 2:05 1/3 over Thomas B. Scott. So far in 1952, the bay stallion from the Good Time Stable of Goshen, N. Y., has won $94,599—a new one-year mark for a sulky-pulling horse.

A's Pitching Plagues Yankees; Phillies Deal Blow to Giants

By WILL GRIMSLEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

It's almost home for the Dodgers in the National League, there's a real dogfight in the American and a couple of managers can take bows today, as prophets senior grade.

"We won't blow it again," predicted Brooklyn's manager Charley Dressen. Today his hirelings, refusing to panic, are four full games ahead of the miracle-less New York Giants with only eight games to play.

"If we didn't have to face that Philadelphia pitching I'd say we'd win the pennant, but now it looks tough," said Casey Stengel, wrinkled old master of the world champion New York Yankees.

Stengel got that taste of Athletics' pitching last night in diminutive Bobby Shantz, who shut out the Yankees 2-0 for his 24th victory while Cleveland was pelting hapless Detroit, 4-1.

These developments left the Yankees with only a game and a half margin over the pursuing Indians, and pressure building up daily.

Error Hurts Giants

A first-inning error sent the Giants down to defeat. Clint Hartung dropped a fly ball which let Richie Ashburn get on base and a few moments later Del Ennis brought Ashburn home with a single for the only run of the game. Curt Simmons, the southpaw fireballer, won his 13th game for the Phillies against eight defeats while Maglie, winner of 17, dropped his eighth.

A wild pitch by the Braves' Max Surkont and a mental lapse by outfielder Sam Jethroe contributed to Brooklyn's triumph at Boston.

With the score tied at 2-2, Surkont threw wildly to Billy Morgan and Roy Campanella raced home with the tie-breaking run in the eighth. Another run was added before the Dodgers' halfinning was ended under threatening skies.

Both runs would have been nullified and the game reverted to the seventh if Jethroe hadn't been too anxious. With two out and the count two balls and one strike, Jethroe hit the next pitch for an infield out just as a torrential rain desended. That pitch was the last of the game, since the contest was stopped immediately, later called. If Sam had taken the pitch or stalled momentarily, it would have been deadlock.

Shantz Unbeatable

Shantz, the vest pocket portsider, registered his fifth shutout of the season against the Yankees and stretched his string of scoreless innings against the champions to 29. Only four Yankees got safeties and six of them went down swinging at the little pitcher's jughandle curve. Dave Philley accounted for the two A's runs with a triple in the third.

Early Wynn's 22nd pitching victory and Larry Doby's 31st home run were the big factors in Cleveland's triumph over Detroit. Wynn hurled an eight-hitter.

In other National League games, the St. Louis Cardinals downed the Chicago Cubs, 5-3, and Cincinati topped Pittsburgh, 4-3.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Pitching: Bobby Shantz, Athletics—Shut out the Yankees, 2-0, on four hits for his 24th victory.

Batting: Larry Doby, Indians—Drove in two runs with his 31st homer as Cleveland defeated Detroit, 4-1, and moved within game and a half of Yanks.

Why Use a Scope Sight?

By WARREN PAGE
(Shooting Editor)

Most people think of telescopic rifle sights as 20th century gadgets, newfangled niceties like those ventilator holes in the family sedan. But optical sights were in use before the Civil War, and in that fracas snipers used scoped-up rifles to knock generals off their chargers.

Early examples of rifle glassware were crude and extremely fragile, although they made possible fine long-range accuracy with ponderous .50 calibre muzzle-loaders. The speed-up in rifle sight design began about 30 years ago, with the German optical plants taking a lead that wasn't fully wiped out until this past war.

At that stage of the game, the scope really began its heydey in this country. U. S. rifle shooters now have available glass sights that are the best in the world—for ruggedness against gun kick and the beating we give our hunting rifles, for exactness of adjustment, for brilliance and those other points of optical quality, most of them with four-bit names that mean real seeing excellence.

For almost any kind of riflery, big game, small game, or paper targets, they're as far ahead of iron sights as a 1952 Cadillac is ahead of a 1920 Overland. So now I've gone out on a limb—let's see why it's a tough one to saw off.

With any type of iron sights, the Rocky Mountain buckhorn or flat-topped leaf, the peep sight on the receiver or the tang, your eyes are up against a tough problem in optics. With open sights you must focus on three points all at once—on the notch of the rear leaf, the blade or head of the front sight, and on the target way out yonder.

With a peep, proper aiming procedure calls for letting the peep ring or hole go fuzzy, but the eye is still expected to focus both on a front sight perhaps 30 inches away and on a bull's-eye or buck's shoulder a hundred yards out. Young eyes can get away with such stunts. Old ones can't and the eyes of the average guy past 40 have lost much of their power of multiple-distance focus.

With the scope there is no such problem. You look through the glass only at your target; and the reticle or aiming point, be it crosshairs, a vertical flat-topped post, a round dot, or any combination of these, seems to be projected out into space, pasted flat on your target. To hold high for a long shot, you just move that aiming marker where you want it on the animal.

And the target comes in closer. If the scope you are using is a 2½-X, the magnification most common for big game use, the bull elk looms up at only 40 yards instead of 100. If it's a four-power, a sheep 200 yards down the slide appears to you at 50. You can see what you're shooting at. The glass will tell you whether that set of legs in the brush belongs to a buck or a doe, because you'll be able to see antlers, if there are any, some 2½ or 4 times as clearly as with the naked eye. You can see what you shouldn't shoot at, too. I've never heard of a hunter being mistaken for a deer by a rifleman using a scope.

You can see later into the evening than you can with iron sights. One Quebec moose I killed was to the naked eye just a blob against the dark spruces. Through my scope it showed as a good bull, with the shoulder clear enough for a certain shot.

Bivins Kayoes Coley in Ninth

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—Jimmy Bivins, 32-year-old veteran of 104 professional fights, put in a call for Rex Layne and Ezzard Charles today after stopping young Coley Wallace cold in the ninth round.

"We have a tentative match with Charles," said Allie Jack, manager of Bivins, last night after Jimmy knocked out his youthful opponent with a right to the jaw in 17 seconds of the ninth round at St. Nicholas Arena. "But we primarily want Layne," he added.

Wallace, who was ahead on all three score cards until he ran into Bivins' right, claimed he was thumbed and was unable to see the blow coming. There were swellings under both of Wallace's eyes before the fight ended.

It was only the second loss for Wallace, who once beat Rocky Marciano in the 1948 Golden Gloves.

2nd Catalina Swim Try for Chadwick

Avalon, Calif., Sept. 20 (AP)—Barring a turn for the worse by the weather and weather conditions, hefty Florence Chadwick is set to make her second attempt to swim the 21-mile Santa Catalina Channel to the mainland early tonight.

The 33-year-old brunette from San Diego, who twice swam the English Channel, hoped to wade into the water at an undisclosed point on Catalina Island sometime between 5:30 and 7:30 p. m. (7:30 and 9:30 p. m. Eastern Standard Time).

Last July 3, and 4 Florence made unsuccessful try in the chilly waters.

Fisher and Finn Likely Hurlers In Payoff Game

Jones Win Would End 1952 Season

Topheavy with well-rested pitchers, Jones Dairy and Wiltwyck Motors clash belatedly Sunday at the Athletic Field to settle the question of who is winner of the second round.

Game time is 2:05 p. m.

Veteran Tommy Fisher remains an unwavering choice for the Dairymen. Whenever a "big one" crops up, the Joneses sink or swim with Fisher.

Had the contest been played earlier in the week, Wiltwyck Motors might have gone with Bud Finn, a cagey, control pitcher. Now they have Joe Digastino and Ernie McCormick in the picture but Finn still looks like the choice.

If Wiltwyck's cop Sunday's game, a best-of-three championship series will be played between the two clubs for the 1952 bunting. Jones Dairy won the first round in a squeaker against the Motormen and tied in the second half.

Close Games the Rule

Most of the games between the clubs this season have been outstanding examples of twilight league ball. There have been several extra inning clashes and in nearly all the jousts one run decided the game.

The interim since Wiltwycks' last outing should work in favor of Jones Dairy, unless the long layoff shows its effects on the Jones swingers.

Following Wiltwyck Motors' wrapup, six members of the Highland aggregation distinguished themselves in the Poughkeepsie All Stars' rousing victory over the local all stars. The ball club was hot at the time and might have asserted themselves in the scheduled Tuesday game with Jones Dairy.

Then came the rains, the layoff and now the Sunday clash rates as a tossup.

Police Say Driver Runs Into Unprotected Ditch

A 1951 sedan driven by Francis J. McCullough, Route 1, Box 268, Kingston, ran into an excavation near 285 Flatbush avenue at 2 p. m. yesterday, police reported.

Officers Louis W. Sapp, Jr., and Walter Fitzgerald reported that the right wheel of the car, which was traveling west on Flatbush avenue, dropped about three and a half feet into the hole and the left wheel about eight inches. The excavation, which police said was dug by a local plumber, extended about three-quarters of the way across the road. Police said that no signs or lanterns had been placed at the site and that no permit had been issued for the excavation.

The baby of a large kangaroo is only about an inch long at birth.

KHS Opens Football Season Against Mont Pleasant at Stadium Tonight

Carmen Massa, who figures to do a lot of passing, running and kicking tonight at municipal stadium, is shown above flanked by the principal backfield operators for the Maroon—Roger Billings, Pat Manfro, Ed Van Loan and Orville Giles.

Kingston High School's "Junior" football squad opens the 1952 campaign against Mont Pleasant of Schenectady tonight at 8 o'clock.

Game time for the first Saturday arclighter in KHS history is 8 o'clock.

Mont Pleasant, with one of eastern New York's best scholastic backs in Walt Jablonski, is favored to beat the young but speedy KHS eleven.

Coach Bill Burke has not announced a starting lineup but yesterday issued a tentative varsity roster of 17 players.

Bill Engle, who will start at one of the tackles; Carmen Massa, a triple-threat back and Pat Manfro, the only senior on the squad are the principal holdovers from 1951.

Billings at Quarter

Roger Billings will call the plays in the backfield, with Carmen Massa and Orville Giles at the halfbacks and Pat Manfro at fullback. Ed Van Loan and Kenny Kouhoupt are other backfield operators who may see action.

Bill Glennon is listed as a reserve center behind LeFevre and Bill Ritter is available to spell Gallo or Kuntz. Bruce Munson is the tackle alternate and Ronnie Hooper is the No. 3 end.

Little advance information is available on the usually rugged Red Raiders. The Mont Pleasant squad has a new coach and new system and, if anything, figures to be the equal of the team that won last year's opener from Kingston on the Dorpian gridiron.

SPORTS

By CHARLES J. TIANO
Freeman Sports Editor

This is the night Bill Burke unveils the "Split-T" and the 1952 KHS football squad against mighty Mont Pleasant of Schenectady at municipal stadium.

The contest is historically significant for two reasons. It marks the Maroon's first outing under the arcs on a Saturday night but of more than academic interest to rival coaches, Burke's departure from the single-wing attack after years of enormous success.

Burke's mastery of the single-wing whenever he had a fair shake in material earned him the reputation of being the best high school coach in these parts. His decision to scrap the power thrusts of the wing must have been reached reluctantly.

And don't bet he doesn't return to it when the proper material comes along. Meanwhile, let's see what KHS can do with this guy Jablonski tonight.

An ageless creature, the stout-hearted New York Giant fan bobbed up in the person of Supervisor Ken Wilson of Woodstock who was attending a kaffee klatsch of the county Republican committee Tuesday night at Schoentag's.

Despite the proximity of Paul Freer, the rabid Yankee follower, the supervisor told a guy he has been a Giant rooter "since way back."

"I was particularly interested in your comments about Leo Durocher's use of Jack Harshmann as a starter against the Cubs," he said. "It was significant because I know how much of a Yankee rooter you are."

"I have no particular preference in the National League, the other guy replied, "and if I root for the Dodgers just a shade it's because they seem to come up with better World Series accommodations. It could be that Pete Hoffmann and Gary Schumacher give the best seats to real Giant fans first."

Did the supervisor know that in Kingston and surrounding territory the Giant rooters outnumbered the combined total of all other teams . . . Yankees, Dodgers, Cardinals, etc.?

"I never thought of it that way," Wilson replied, "but I always felt that there were quite a few of us around."

The guy could have told the supervisor that real Giant fans are born and they represent the finest breed of sports followers. It's handed down from father to son and flourishes in adversity, lives in eternal hope and is probably the most loyal species in the sports world. This mind you, coming from a guy who has been riding the Yankee bandwagon since the days of Babe Ruth, through Lou Gehrig and Joe DiMaggio and now Mickey Mantle, the greatest star of the coming generation.

The next few moments were devoted to a discussion of Giant pennant chances and you never count the Giants out while the Dodgers flounder a notch ahead of them.

The conversation turned to football and Ken asked a question that is popular in local sports these days:

"How do you think our boy Ed (Weaver) will make out at the Point this year?"

The temptation is to say quickly, "He'll be a big star and bid for the All-America," and then sit back to see what happens. But Weaver's status is in many ways an unusual one.

Although Big Ed has had more actual varsity football experience than any member of the 1952 West Point squad, he is rated as just a "reserve end." But, since you can't escape the fact that Big Ed was heading toward All-America recognition before he left school, you feel he'll make a smashing comeback.

As Wilson put it: "They won't ever find an end with a better pair of hands than Weaver." And the other guy doubted seriously if the Point has a better offense wingman than the former KHS athlete.

Weaver's future at the Point should start to shape itself on Sept. 26 in the seasonal opener against North Carolina. A bigger, stronger boy than the year he was Earl Blaik's No. 1 offensive end, we don't see how Weaver can miss regaining his pristine form.

A reader disputes a recent item that Leroy "Pappy" Wells was the first Kingston outboard motor pilot to complete the Albany-to-New York "Driftwood Derby" run.

"You might be interested to know," said the reader, "that on May 9, 1931, Ben Rhymer finished sixth in a boat named "Sliver" in the Class F division. He finished in 4th position in his particular class. He was the first driver to reach Poughkeepsie in a 1:33:30 clocking for the 70-mile stretch. This was equivalent to better than 46 miles per hour. He ran into difficulty in the lower Hudson area due to poor weather conditions that made visibility nearly zero. The above information can be verified in the June 1931 issue of the Motor Boating magazine."

Okay, Pappy, you're the second.

Little Brown Jug To Meadow Rice

Delaware, O., Sept. 20 (AP)—W. G. Reynolds, the big aluminum and tobacco man from Louisville, Ky., figures he's no longer a jinx to his great three-year-old pacer, Meadow Rice.

Meadow Rice proved it to him yesterday, and handed him a $30,231.66 purse, by winning the seventh annual $60,463.35 "Little Brown Jug" while Reynolds watched from atop the grandstand.

The brown colt, after being shunted to third place—that's as far back as he's been this year in 23 starts—in Thursday's opening heat of the rain-halted "Jug," came back yesterday to take two miles tests in a row to wrap up the laurels.

He did it in world record time for a divided three-heat race, for the time of the three miles totalled 6:06 2/5, more than three seconds under the 6:09 3/5 record set in 1950 when Dudley Hanover triumphed.

Reynolds flew back to Louisville yesterday morning for a business engagement, but was back in Delaware for the second day of the race. After Meadow Rice, sterling son of the widower, came roaring home with the cash, Reynolds said:

"This is my biggest thrill. To tell the truth, I thought I was a jinx to Meadow Rice. I've seen him race 10 times before today, but I've seen him win only once. At least a half-dozen times I've watched him 'photoed' out and I thought it was going to happen again."

Southern Cal in Rose Bowl Future Book Following 35-7 Rout of Washington S.

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—One victory doesn't necessarily assure a trip to the Rose Bowl but Southern California is one up on the other Pacific Coast Conference teams today as college football dents the national sports picture with a goodly sprinkling of major games.

The Trojans from USC rode roughshod over Washington State, 35-7, last night to get the jump on their conference rivals.

Southern Cal led 14-0 at halftime and piled on three more touchdowns in the third period. The winners put together only one sustained march—a 53-yard, 10-play junket — but overwhelmed State via a series of spectacular pass interception runbacks and a 77-yard punt return.

In the other top games under the lights last night, Alabama set a Southeastern Conference record of 12 fumbles but managed to turn back a surprisingly strong Mississippi Southern outfit, 20-6. Another SEC member, Mississippi, opened with a 54-6 romp over Memphis State.

Except in the south and far west most of today's top games have an intersectional hue.

From a nation-wide spectator viewpoint the No. 1 game is at Lawrence, Kans., where the University of Kansas Jayhawks, fortified by the ex-Army star, Gil Reich, play host to Texas Christian, defending Southwest Conference champion. Kansas is the No. 2 pick back of Oklahoma in the Big Seven.

This game is the first of 11 to be telecast nationally under the NCAA's 1952 television program. It is to be carried by NBC-TV and is scheduled to start at 3 p. m., Eastern Standard Time.

Top attractions include Temple at Penn State, Connecticut at Yale.

Good Time Wins

Cleveland, Sept. 20 (AP)—Good Time, top money-winning harness horse of all time, earned $5,000 by winning the $10,000 Parshall Free-For-All pace last night at Grandview Track and raised his earnings to $303,092. The 3-5 favorite won in 2:05 1/3 over Thomas B. Scott. So far in 1952, the bay stallion from the Good Time Stable of Goshen, N. Y., has won $94,599—a new one-year mark for a sulky-pulling horse.

A's Pitching Plagues Yankees; Phillies Deal Blow to Giants

By WILL GRIMSLEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

It's almost home for the Dodgers in the National League, there's a real dogfight in the American and a couple of managers can take bows today as prophets senior grade.

"We won't blow it again," predicted Brooklyn's manager Charley Dressen. Today his hirelings, refusing to panic, are four full games ahead of the miracle-less New York Giants with only eight games to play.

"If we didn't have to face that Philadelphia pitching I'd say we'd win the pennant, but now it looks tough," said Casey Stengel, wrinkled old master of the world champion New York Yankees.

Stengel got that taste of Athletics' pitching last night in diminutive Bobby Shantz, who shut out the Yankees 2-0 for his 24th victory while Cleveland was pelting hapless Detroit, 4-1.

These developments left the Yankees with only a game and a half margin over the pursuing Indians, and pressure building up daily.

Error Hurts Giants

A first-inning error sent the Giants down to defeat. Clint Hartung dropped a fly ball which let Richie Ashburn get on base and a few moments later Del Ennis brought Ashburn home with a single for the only run of the game. Curt Simmons, the southpaw fireballer, won his 13th game for the Phillies against eight defeats while Maglie, winner of 17, dropped his eighth.

A wild pitch by the Braves' Max Surkont and a mental lapse by outfielder Sam Jethroe contributed to Brooklyn's triumph at Boston.

With the score tied at 2-2, Surkont threw wildly to Billy Morgan and Roy Campanella raced home with the tie-breaking run in the eighth. Another run was added before the Dodgers' half-inning was ended under threatening skies.

Both runs would have been nullified and the game reverted to the seventh if Jethroe hadn't been too anxious. With two out and the count two balls and one strike, Jethroe hit the next pitch for an infield out just as a torrential rain desended. That pitch was the last of the game, since the contest was stopped immediately, later called. If Sam had taken the pitch or stalled momentarily, it would have been deadlock.

Shantz Unbeatable

Shantz, the vest pocket portsider, registered his fifth shutout of the season against the Yankees and stretched his string of scoreless innings against the champions to 29. Only four Yankees got safeties and six of them went down swinging at the little pitcher's jughandle curve. Dave Philley accounted for the two A's runs with a triple in the third.

Early Wynn's 22nd pitching victory and Larry Doby's 31st home run were the big factors in Cleveland's triumph over Detroit. Wynn hurled an eight-hitter.

In other National League games, the St. Louis Cardinals downed the Chicago Cubs, 5-3, and Cincinati topped Pittsburgh, 4-3.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Pitching: Bobby Shantz, Athletics—Shut out the Yankees, 2-0, on four hits for his 24th victory.

Batting: Larry Doby, Indians—Drove in two runs with his 31st homer as Cleveland defeated Detroit, 4-1, and moved within game and a half of Yanks.

By WARREN PAGE
(Shooting Editor)

Most people think of telescopic rifle sights as 20th century gadgets, newfangled niceties like those ventilator holes in the family sedan. But optical sights were in use before the Civil War, and in that fracas snipers used scoped-up rifles to knock generals off their chargers.

Early examples of rifle glassware were crude and extremely fragile, although they made possible fine long-range accuracy with ponderous .50 calibre muzzle-loaders. The speed-up in rifle sight design began about 30 years ago, with the German optical plants taking a lead that wasn't fully wiped out until this past war.

At that stage of the game, the scope really began its heydey in this country. U. S. rifle shooters now have available glass sights that are the best in the world—for ruggedness against gun kick and the beating we give our hunting rifles, for exactness of adjustment, for brilliance and those other points of optical quality, most of them with four-bit names that mean real seeing excellence.

For almost any kind of riflery, big game, small game, or paper targets, they're as far ahead of iron sights as a 1952 Cadillac is ahead of a 1920 Overland. So now I've gone out on a limb—let's see why it's a tough one to saw off.

With any type of iron sights, the Rocky Mountain buckhorn or flat-topped leaf, the peep sight on the receiver or the tang, your eyes are up against a tough problem in optics. With open sights you must focus on three points all at once—on the notch of the rear leaf, the blade or head of the front sight, and on the target way out yonder.

With a peep, proper aiming procedure calls for letting the peep ring or hole go fuzzy, but the eye is still expected to focus both on a front sight perhaps 30 inches away and on a bull's-eye or buck's shoulder a hundred yards out. Young eyes can get away with such stunts. Old ones can't and the eyes of the average guy past 40 have lost much of their power of multiple-distance focus.

With the scope there is no such problem. You look through the glass only at your target; and the reticle or aiming point, be it crosshairs, a vertical flat-topped post, a round dot, or any combination of these, seems to be projected out into space, pasted flat on your target. To hold high for a long shot, you just move that aiming marker where you want it on the animal.

And the target comes in closer. If the scope you are using is a 2½-X, the magnification most common for big game use, the bull elk looms up at only 40 yards instead of 100. If it's a four-power, a sheep 200 yards down the slide appears to you at 50. You can see what you're shooting at. The glass will tell you whether that set of legs in the brush belongs to a buck or a doe, because you'll be able to see antlers, if there are any, some 2½ or 4 times as clearly as with the naked eye. You can see what you shouldn't shoot at, too. I've never heard of a hunter being mistaken for a deer by a rifleman using a scope.

You can see later into the evening than you can with iron sights. One Quebec moose I killed was to the naked eye just a blob against the dark spruces. Through my scope it showed as a good bull, with the shoulder clear enough for a certain shot.

Bivins Kayoes Coley in Ninth

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—Jimmy Bivins, 32-year-old veteran of 104 professional fights, put in a call for Rex Layne and Ezzard Charles today after stopping young Coley Wallace cold in the ninth round.

"We have a tentative match with Charles," said Allie Jack, manager of Bivins, last night after Jimmy knocked out his youthful opponent with a right to the jaw in 17 seconds of the ninth round at St. Nicholas Arena. "But we primarily want Layne," he added.

Wallace, who was ahead on all three score cards until he ran into Bivins' right, claimed he was thumbed and was unable to see the blow coming. There were swellings under both of Wallace's eyes before the fight ended.

It was only the second loss for Wallace, who once beat Rocky Marciano in the 1948 Golden Gloves.

2nd Catalina Swim Try for Chadwick

Avalon, Calif., Sept. 20 (AP)—Barring a turn for the worse by the weather and weather conditions, hefty Florence Chadwick is set to make her second attempt to swim the 21-mile Santa Catalina Channel to the mainland early tonight.

The 33-year-old brunette from San Diego, who twice swam the English Channel, hoped to wade into the water at an undisclosed point on Catalina Island sometime between 5:30 and 7:30 p. m. (7:30 and 9:30 p. m. Eastern Standard Time).

Last July 3, and 4 Florence made unsuccessful try in the chilly waters.

Fisher and Finn Likely Hurlers In Payoff Game

Jones Win Would End 1952 Season

Topheavy with well-rested pitchers, Jones Dairy and Wiltwyck Motors clash belatedly Sunday at the Athletic Field to settle the question of who is winner of the second round.

Game time is 2:05 p. m.

Veteran Tommy Fisher remains an unwavering choice for the Dairymen. Whenever a "big one" crops up, the Joneses sink or swim with Fisher.

Had the contest been played earlier in the week, Wiltwyck Motors might have gone with Bud Finn, a cagey, control pitcher. Now they have Joe Digastino and Ernie McCormick in the picture but Finn still looks like the choice.

If Wiltwyck's cop Sunday's game, a best-of-three championship series will be played between the two clubs for the 1952 bunting. Jones Dairy won the first round in a squeaker against the Motormen and tied in the second half.

Close Games the Rule

Most of the games between the clubs this season have been outstanding examples of twilight league ball. There have been several extra inning clashes and in nearly all the jousts one run decided the game.

The interim since Wiltwycks' last outing should work in favor of Jones Dairy, unless the long layoff shows its effects on the Jones swingers.

Following Wiltwyck Motors' wrapup, six members of the Highland aggregation distinguished themselves in the Poughkeepsie All Stars' rousing victory over the local all stars. The ball club was hot at the time and might have asserted themselves in the scheduled Tuesday game with Jones Dairy.

Then came the rains, the layoff and now the Sunday clash rates as a tossup.

Police Say Driver Runs Into Unprotected Ditch

A 1951 sedan driven by Francis J. McCullough, Route 1, Box 268, Kingston, ran into an excavation near 285 Flatbush avenue at 2 p. m. yesterday, police reported.

Officers Louis W. Sapp, Jr., and Walter Fitzgerald reported that the right wheel of the car, which was traveling west on Flatbush avenue, dropped about three and a half feet into the hole and the left wheel about eight inches. The excavation, which police said was dug by a local plumber, extended about three-quarters of the way across the road. Police said that no signs or lanterns had been placed at the site and that no permit had been issued for the excavation.

Up to Committee To Replace Nixon In Case of Vacancy

Washington, Sept. 20 (AP)—Reports that some Republican advisers feel Senator Richard M. Nixon should resign as vice presidential nominee sent newsmen scurrying for precedents today on how vacancies on national tickets are filled.

There is no exact parallel although one vacancy was filled back in 1860 for another reason. Then the national committee — Democrat in this instance — named a new candidate.

Machinery is available for filling vacancies before an election. Each party sees to that before concluding its national convention every four years.

Rests With Committee

This year the Republicans authorized their national committee (a) to fill any vacancy on the national ticket "by reason of death, declination, or otherwise" or (b) the national committee "in its judgment may call a national convention" for such purpose.

Party officials willing to discuss such a possibility only from a procedure standpoint—and not to lend substance to any reported move to replace Nixon—said the committee would have to pick another candidate in this instance as there would be insufficient time between now and Election Day Nov. 4 to assemble another national convention.

The resolution adopted at the July convention in Chicago left up in the air how the national committee members would get instructions on how to vote. It did say that each state would have the same number of votes as it had in the convention. But how, for example, would New York's three committee members cast 96 votes, the number it had at Chicago.

Would Make Rules

One authority said:

"When the national committee met, it would have to adopt some ground rules on this point."

No presidential candidate of either major party has died before election. One vice presidential candidate died just before election. And another declined the nomination and had to be replaced.

In 1912 James Sherman, vice presidential candidate on the Republican ticket headed by President Taft, died on the Saturday before Election Day. The Republicans had no time to replace him. It didn't matter much. They lost.

In 1860 the Democratic party split in two; one faction called itself the Independent Democrats, the other the Democrats. The former nominated Stephen A. Douglas for president and Benjamin Fitzpatrick for vice president.

Fitzpatrick declined the nomination. The Independents' national committee then named Herschel V. Johnson as vice presidential candidate. That was the year the other half of the party, calling itself just the Democrats, picked J. C. Breckenbridge for president and Joseph Lane for vice president. It also was the year when the Republicans won with Abraham Lincoln.

84 Nurses Are Needed To Handle Polio Cases

Washington, Sept. 20 (AP)—The Red Cross says there is an immediate need for 84 additional nurses to help treat polio cases in Iowa, Nebraska and Minnesota.

Miss Ann K. Magnussen, director of nursing services for the Red Cross, added that many more are needed in other areas, but did not specify them.

She asked yesterday that professional nurses who are not now active apply at once to their local Red Cross Chapters for polio assignment.

The Red Cross recruits nurses for such work in behalf of the National Foundation of Infantile Paralysis, which pays their salaries and transportation expenses.

Yule Seal Sale, Heart Fund to Be Discussed

Mrs. William McNamee, member of the board of directors of the Ulster County TB and Health Association; T. J. Rifenbary, member of the Heart Committee, and Katherine M. Murphy, RN, executive secretary, will attend a conference Monday at the Hotel Salpaugh in Catskill. This meeting is one of eight being held in different sections of New York state.

During these conferences, volunteer committee members will discuss with local workers and leaders of the county and state voluntary agencies conducting the Christmas Seal Sale and Heart Fund Campaign ways and means used in the various counties for organizational and promotional procedures, publicity and program. It is expected that representatives from Columbia, Greene, Sullivan, Scoharie, Dutchess and Orange will also attend the discussions and luncheon meeting.

The 1952 Christmas Seal Sale will open in Ulster county Monday, Nov. 24.

Victim of Gangland

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—A middle-aged man, tentatively identified as a Bronx hoodlum with a long police record, was found shot to death today in a slaying that had all the earmarks of a gangland killing. The man, believed to be Eugene Giannini, 42, of 282 West 234th street, the Bronx, was found dead in the gutter at 221 East 107th street. Police said robbery was not a motive in the slaying because $140 in cash was found in the victim's pocket. Detectives said Giannini had a record of arrests on charges of homicide, robbery, felonious assault, illegal possession of a gun, narcotics law violation and, more recently on a U. S. Treasury Department complaint.

Indicted in Dad's Death

Bridgeport, Conn., Sept. 20 (AP)—Lois Curtis, 33-year-old Norwalk woman accused of the mercy killing of her gravely ill father, was indicted on a charge of second degree murder by a Superior Court grand jury here yesterday. Partially paralyzed from the effects of the same gas fumes that killed 72-year-old John W. Curtis, the ex-Wac listened tensely as the foreman of the grand jury read off the indictment accusing her of taking her father's life by turning open the jets on a kitchen gas range in their Norwalk home last Aug. 30. The jury heard witnesses and deliberated an hour before handing the indictment to Judge James E. Murphy who set no trial date. Second degree murder in Connecticut is punishable on conviction by life imprisonment.

WOODSTOCK NEWS

By RICHARD S. THIBAUT, Jr.

At Work in Studio

Woodstock, Sept. 19—Adrian Siegel, musician, painter and photographer, painting in his Bearsville studio.

Siegel Acclaimed For His Photos

Woodstock, Sept. 19 — "Adrian Siegel," wrote Charles D. Sigsbee last January, in the magazine section of the Baltimore Sun, "plays first camera with the Philadelphia Orchestra." Conversely, Siegel also paints the foremost photographs in the Woodstock Artists Association. During the winter months Siegel, from his place in the cello section of the Philadelphia Orchestra, with his camera always at hand during rehearsals, catches the world's great in music during the off-guard fleeting moments which reveal them as human beings hard at work. These have won Siegel a unique reputation as a photographer, and many of his superlative photos are frequently seen in the music advertisements for Steinway pianos in the national magazines.

Once the music season closes, Siegel abandons his cello, except for the necessary practice hours, and with his camera in one hand and a paint brush in the other, returns to his Bearsville home for the summer, and to the world of the artist in this colony.

Whether his subjects are musicians or painters, the pictures are remarkable for their candid, unposed quality. Leafing through impressive series of photographs at his studio, which is a combination painter's paradise, workshop and dark room, Siegel observed:

Difference Obvious

"See the difference between a musician actually playing and one posing for his picture?"

The difference was obvious. Musicians themselves detect this quality immediately, hence the popularity of his pictures among his fellow musicians, who seek them for their collections.

The only time Siegel was the recipient of a thoroughly dirty look was when the famed violinist Jasha Heifetz was playing the orchestra and spotted a Leica popping up from the cello section during a rehearsal. Siegel hurridly thrust his camera away but not before he had managed to get a shot. When Heifetz returned for another concert Adrian presented him with a print, and Heifetz was delighted with it. After that day's rehearsal he cornered the photographer and eagerly inquired, "Did you get any"

Continued study of his photographs reveal his exceptional ability, which indeed might be termed "great," for choosing the exact moment, the perfectly timed second for arresting the right second on film. Anyone who has observed Siegel in action, at an artists' gathering, at a fair or concert, may note that he doesn't take many pictures. He never requests his subjects to "hold it," or to "wait a moment" while he fiddles with angles. Siegel moves quietly, almost invisibly about, with only an occasional muffled click as evidence of his presence. Usually his subjects are not even aware that they are being photographed. Children are one of his chief delights, and Woodstock parents who possess a Siegel photograph of their child, usually caught in a fleeting second of action, feel that they have a rare treasure.

Camera from Ormandy

It was the gift of a Leica camera from his friend, Eugene Ormandy, conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra, who returned with it from Europe in 1937, which launched Siegel on his career as a top-flight photographer, although he began taking photographs at the age of 11 with a $1 camera. Born in New York of Russian immigrant parents, Siegel began to study the cello at the age of seven because his father learned that there was a shortage of cellists in America. As his twin interests grew, it was not until 1922 that he discovered his third talent when he came to Woodstock with Leon Barzin, now conductor of the National Orchestra Association. For a short time Siegel did participate in the musical life of the community, playing in quartets with Barzin, but once he had begun to paint, he trained his lenses on the artists in the colony.

Unhampered by "ambition," Siegel appears to succeed miraculously in everything he attempts to do, but withall there is a noticeable absence of feverish activity in the Siegel household. In a relaxed, truly happy atmosphere, Adrian and his wife, Sophie, who is an accomplished pianist although she does not play professionally, contribute an enormous amount of time to summer activities here. Retiring this year as a member of the executive board of the Artists Association, Siegel was one of those who worked tirelessly on the Art Film Festival presented at the Playhouse last year.

Although he is a far cry from the shutter-happy camera addict, Siegel, when he returns to Philadelphia and the world of music, will take with him next Tuesday about a thousand negatives, the results of this summer's work which he will print at leisure. They will represent probably a complete picture of the artists' activities in this village.

Marionette Show To Be Presented At Local School

Woodstock, Sept. 20 — The Berkeley Marionettes, who have according to Parents Magazine, "come to be a household word in school circles," will be presented by the Woodstock School Thursday, Sept. 25, at 7:30 p. m. Children and adults as well will be offered the opportunity to see their latest production prior to the troupe's return to New York where each year they entertain thousands of children. The play is entitled The Mysterious Island and is in six scenes, each scene more exciting than the last.

The drama critic of the New York Sun wrote after seeing one of their performances: "An audience of seven hundred children, and you could have heard a mouse squeak!"

Several years ago several Woodstockers saw two productions given by the Berkeley Marionettes. They are still talking about the two shows Master Skylark and Tom Sawyer, recalling the fine quality of the productions and have repeatedly asked for another performance. After next Thursday's performance it is expected that many more young fans will be added to their list.

Woodstockers will also be interested to know that the Berkeley Marionettes are owned by Florence and Stephen Gitnick who recently bought the old Yaple house on the Zena road. It is here in their beautiful remodeled home that the Gitnicks prepare each new show for the season. Florence writes the scripts as well as dressing and making the puppets, directs the shows and is the star performer in all productions.

The sets for the productions are frequently painted by a Woodstock artist and the miniature props and unusual effects are executed by Stephen Gitnick, Jan Marasek and John Loftus. Loftus also plays the villians and character parts while Jan is now well known in this village for his work at the Maverick Theatre and the Woodstock Playhouse last season. He will also act in the Berkeley productions this winter.

After attending a performance of Master Skylark at the New York Times Book Fair, Anne Carroll Moore of the New York Public Library, wrote of the presentation of Master Skylark as the "most interesting feature I have seen in the auditorium. It had a real sense of drama, rather than a piece of book service. The manipulation was carried on with great care, and the audience gave double attention, it seemed to me. I would rate Master Skylark as the best of anything I have seen there before."

Says U. S. Strength Must Remain Firm

Attorney Sherwood E. Davis of Kingston, addressing members of Local 417, Ironworkers Union, at their regular monthly meeting in Newburgh Friday night, said the United States' armed strength at home and abroad must remain at a high level for many years because of the "irreconcilable differences between the political philosophies of the U. S. and Russia."

"That is the only way at the present time to minimize the possibility of armed conflict," he said.

Davis urged that a strong international policy be adopted to make the peoples of the world recognize "our friendship and sincerity." Such a policy, he said, "is vital to our future security."

Davis is director of civil defense for the city of Kingston.

Hope Held to Avert Coal Strike Monday

Washington, Sept. 20 (AP)—John L. Lewis' contract with northern soft coal mines expires at midnight tonight but there was still hope a strike due Monday could be averted.

Many of the strike-threatened mines planned to keep operating today, some paying overtime wages to get an extra day's production before a strike could develop.

A number of industry and government sources said Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers Union, and Harry Moses, president of the northern owner group known as the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, actually were close to reaching agreement on contract terms.

But they apparently had been close before, when Lewis earlier this week told reporters he and Moses had reached an understanding. Moses denied it.

An agreement would probably be in the neighborhood of a $1.80 a day for the 200,000 soft coal miners employed by the Moses group of owners, plus a 10-cent-a-ton boost in the welfare fund royalty. The basic daily pay now is $16.35 and the royalty 30 cents a ton.

Those familiar with the industry's labor relations were confident that once terms with Moses are agreed upon, the same terms would be pressed on the rest of the industry.

Agapae Rebekah Lodge Elects New Officers

Secret pals for the past year were revealed amid much glee and laughter and many surprises. Refreshments were served after the meeting.

It was announced that beginning with the October meetings, the lodge will start at 7:30 p. m.

Attorney Francis Martocci represented the defendant and Attorney John Larkin appeared for the district attorney.

Fred Schryver of Smith avenue, who was arrested March 24 on a charge of driving while intoxicated, was permitted to plead guilty to a charge of reckless driving and was fined $50 by Judge Raymond J. Claims Truck Forced Tractor Off Road

Claiming he had been forced off the road by an unknown truck, Leo Bozydaj, 54, RD Highland, was injured yesterday afternoon when a tractor he was operating went off the road and overturned, pinning the operator to the ground. The tractor is owned by Salvatore Paganello of Brooklyn who owns a summer place at Clintondale.

State police were informed by the caretaker that he had been operating the tractor on South road, Clintondale, when a truck forced him off the road when another truck coming in the opposite direction appeared over a hill. Russell Rhodes, Clintondale, removed the injured man from under the tractor. His injuries were limited to bruises to the right side and he declined medical attention.

Failed to Make Curve

An automobile operated by Peter Rath, 53, of Albany, failed to make a sharp right curve on Route 212 five miles west of Saugerties about 4:30 p. m. Friday and knocked down a mailbox belonging to Richard Barringer, then plunged through a wire and stone fence, state police at the Kingston station reported. No personal injuries were reported.

Charges Hit and Run

Frances Barbara Grafe of Bloomington reported at 5:45 p. m. yesterday that her car was struck and damaged in the Empire Market parking grounds by a vehicle bearing the plate number UL-66-77 NY and that the driver failed to stop.

Up to Committee To Replace Nixon In Case of Vacancy

Washington, Sept. 20 (AP)—Reports that some Republican advisers feel Senator Richard M. Nixon should resign as vice presidential nominee sent newsmen scurrying for precedents today on how vacancies on national tickets are filled.

There is no exact parallel although one vacancy was filled back in 1860 for another reason. Then the national committee — Democrat in this instance — named a new candidate.

Machinery is available for filling vacancies before an election. Each party sees to that before concluding its national convention every four years.

Rests With Committee

This year the Republicans authorized their national committee (a) to fill any vacancy on the national ticket "by reason of death, declination, or otherwise" or (b) the national committee "in its judgment may call a national convention" for such purpose.

Party officials willing to discuss such a possibility only from a procedure standpoint—and not to lend substance to any reported move to replace Nixon—said the committee would have to pick another candidate in this instance as there would be insufficient time between now and Election Day Nov. 4 to assemble another national convention.

The resolution adopted at the July convention in Chicago left up in the air how the national committee members would get instructions on how to vote. It did say that each state would have the same number of votes as it had in the convention. But how, for example, would New York's three committee members cast 96 votes, the number it had at Chicago.

Would Make Rules

One authority said:

"When the national committee met, it would have to adopt some ground rules on this point."

No presidential candidate of either major party has died before election. One vice presidential candidate died just before election. And another declined the nomination and had to be replaced.

In 1912 James Sherman, vice presidential candidate on the Republican ticket headed by President Taft, died on the Saturday before Election Day. The Republicans had no time to replace him. It didn't matter much. They lost.

In 1860 the Democratic party split in two; one faction called itself the Independent Democrats, the other the Democrats. The former nominated Stephen A. Douglas for president and Benjamin Fitzpatrick for vice president.

Fitzpatrick declined the nomination. The Independents' national committee then named Herschel V. Johnson as vice presidential candidate. That was the year the other half of the party, calling itself just the Democrats, picked J. C. Breckenbridge for president and Joseph Lane for vice president. It also was the year when the Republicans won with Abraham Lincoln.

84 Nurses Are Needed To Handle Polio Cases

Washington, Sept. 20 (AP)—The Red Cross says there is an immediate need for 84 additional nurses to help treat polio cases in Iowa, Nebraska and Minnesota.

Miss Ann K. Magnussen, director of nursing services for the Red Cross, added that many more are needed in other areas, but did not specify them.

She asked yesterday that professional nurses who are not now active apply at once to their local Red Cross Chapters for polio assignment.

Ancient Egyptian Cubit

With slight variations of length, the 20.62-inch ancient Egyptian cubit was used by many ancient civilizations including, it is believed, one of those which built some of the now ruined structures in New Mexico.

Yule Seal Sale, Heart Fund to Be Discussed

Mrs. William McNamee, member of the board of directors of the Ulster County TB and Health Association; T. J. Riffenbary, member of the Heart Committee, and Katherine M. Murphy, RN, executive secretary, will attend a conference Monday at the Hotel Salpaugh in Catskill. This meeting is one of eight being held in different sections of New York state.

During these conferences, volunteer committee members will discuss with local workers and leaders of the county and state voluntary agencies conducting the Christmas Seal Sale and Heart Fund Campaign ways and means used in the various counties for organizational and promotional procedures, publicity and program. It is expected that representatives from Columbia, Greene, Sullivan, Scoharie, Dutchess and Orange will also attend the discussions and luncheon meeting.

The 1952 Christmas Seal Sale will open in Ulster county Monday, Nov. 24.

Victim of Gangland

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—A middle-aged man, tentatively identified as a Bronx hoodlum with a long police record, was found shot to death today in a slaying that had all the earmarks of a gangland killing. The man, believed to be Eugene Giannini, 42, of 282 West 234th street, the Bronx, was found dead in the gutter at 221 East 107th street. Police said robbery was not a motive in the slaying because $140 in cash was found in the victim's pocket. Detectives said Giannini had a record of arrests on charges of homicide, robbery, felonious assault, illegal possession of a gun, narcotics law violation and more recently on a U. S. Treasury Department complaint.

Indicted in Dad's Death

Bridgeport, Conn., Sept. 20 (AP)—Lois Curtis, 33-year-old Norwalk woman accused of the mercy killing of her gravely ill father, was indicted on a charge of second degree murder by a Superior Court grand jury here yesterday. Partially paralyzed from the effects of the same gas fumes that killed 72-year-old John W. Curtis, the ex-Wac listened tensely as the foreman of the grand jury read off the indictment accusing her of taking her father's life by turning open the jets on a kitchen gas range in their Norwalk home last Aug. 30. The jury heard witnesses and deliberated an hour before handing the indictment to Judge James E. Murphy who set no trial date. Second degree murder in Connecticut is punishable on conviction by life imprisonment.

WOODSTOCK NEWS

By RICHARD E. THIBAUT, Jr.

At Work in Studio

Woodstock, Sept. 19—Adrian Siegel, musician, painter and photographer, painting in his Bearsville studio.

Siegel Acclaimed For His Photos

Woodstock, Sept. 19—"Adrian Siegel," wrote Charles D. Sigsbee last January, in the magazine section of the Baltimore Sun, "plays first camera with the Philadelphia Orchestra." Conversely, Siegel also paints the foremost photographs in the Woodstock Artists Association. During the winter months Siegel, from his place in the cello section of the Philadelphia Orchestra, with his camera always at hand during rehearsals, catches the world's great in music during the off-guard fleeting moments which reveal them as human beings hard at work. These have won Siegel a unique reputation as a photographer, and many of his superlative photos are frequently seen in the music advertisements for Steinway pianos in the national magazines.

Once the music season closes, Siegel abandons his cello, except for the necessary practice hours, and with his camera in one hand and a paint brush in the other, returns to his Bearsville home for the summer, and to the world of the artist in this colony.

Whether his subjects are musicians or painters, the pictures are remarkable for their candid, unposed quality. Leafing through impressive series of photographs at his studio, which is a combination painter's paradise, workshop and dark room, Siegel observed:

Difference Obvious

"See the difference between a musician actually playing and one posing for his picture?"

The difference was obvious. Musicians themselves detect this quality immediately, hence the popularity of his pictures among his fellow musicians, who seek them for their collections.

The only time Siegel was the recipient of a thoroughly dirty look was when the famed violinist Jasha Heifetz was playing the orchestra and spotted a Leica popping up from the cello section during a rehearsal. Siegel hurridly thrust his camera away but not before he had managed to get a shot. When Heifetz returned for another concert Adrian presented him with a print, and Heifetz was delighted with it. After that day's rehearsal he cornered the photographer and eagerly inquired, "Did you get any"

Although he holds a position in one of the country's leading symphony orchestras, and although his paintings may frequently be seen at the Woodstock Art Gallery, the Philadelphia Art Museum, the Whitney Museum, New York and the Corcoran Gallery in Washington, and although his photographs have been exhibited and published all over the world, Siegel claims that he isn't "great in anything." He declares he simply decided to do a lot of things well.

Continued study of his photographs reveal his exceptional ability, which indeed might be termed "great," for choosing the exact moment, the perfectly timed second for arresting the right second on film. Anyone who has observed Siegel in action, at an artists' gathering, at a fair or concert, may note that he doesn't take many pictures. He never requests his subjects to "hold it," or to "wait a moment" while he fiddles with angles. Siegel moves quietly, almost invisibly about, with only an occasional muffled click as evidence of his presence. Usually his subjects are not even aware that they are being photographed. Children are one of his chief delights, and Woodstock parents who possess a Siegel photograph of their child, usually caught in a fleeting second of action, feel that they have a rare treasure.

Camera from Ormandy

It was the gift of a Leica camera from his friend, Eugene Ormandy, conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra, who returned with it from Europe in 1937, which launched Siegel on his career as a top-flight photographer, although he began taking photographs at the age of 11 with a $1 camera. Born in New York of Russian immigrant parents, Siegel began to study the cello at the age of seven because his father learned that there was a shortage of cellists in America. As his twin interests grew, it was not until 1922 that he discovered his third talent when he came to Woodstock with Leon Barzin, now conductor of the National Orchestra Association. For a short time Siegel did participate in the musical life of the community, playing in quartets with Barzin, buf once he had begun to paint, he trained his lenses on the artists in the colony.

Unhampered by "ambition," Siegel appears to succeed miraculously in everything he attempts to do, but withall there is a notable absence of feverish activity in the Siegel household. In a relaxed, truly happy atmosphere, Adrian and his wife, Sophie, who is an accomplished pianist although she does not play professionally, contribute an enormous amount of time to summer activities here. Retiring this year as a member of the executive board of the Artists Association, Siegel was one of those who worked tirelessly on the Art Film Festival presented at the Playhouse last year.

Although he is a far cry from the shutter-happy camera addict, Siegel, when he returns to Philadelphia and the world of music, will take with him next Tuesday about a thousand negatives, the results of this summer's work which he will print at leisure. They will represent probably a complete picture of the artists' activities in this village.

Marionette Show To Be Presented At Local School

Woodstock, Sept. 20 — The Berkeley Marionettes, who have according to Parents Magazine, "come to be a household word in school circles," will be presented by the Woodstock School Thursday, Sept. 25, at 7:30 p. m. Children and adults as well will be offered the opportunity to see their latest production prior to the troupe's return to New York where each year they entertain thousands of children. The play is entitled The Mysterious Island and is in six scenes, each scene more exciting than the last.

The drama critic of the New York Sun wrote after seeing one of their performances: "An audience of seven hundred children, and you could have heard a mouse squeak!"

Several years ago several Woodstockers saw two productions given by the Berkeley Marionettes. They are still talking about the two shows Master Skylark and Tom Sawyer, recalling the fine quality of the productions and have repeatedly asked for another performance. After next Thursday's performance it is expected that many more young fans will be added to their list.

Woodstockers will also be interested to know that the Berkeley Marionettes are owned by Florence and Stephen Gitnick who recently bought the old Yaple house on the Zena road. It is here in their beautiful remodeled home that the Gitnicks prepare each new show for the season. Florence writes the scripts as well as dressing and making the puppets, directs the shows and is the star performer in all productions.

The sets for the productions are frequently painted by a Woodstock artist and the miniature props and unusual effects are executed by Stephen Gitnick, Jan Marasek and John Loftus. Loftus also plays the villians and character parts while Jan is now well known in this village for his work at the Maverick Theatre and the Woodstock Playhouse last season. He will also act in the Berkeley productions this winter.

After attending a performance of Master Skylark at the New York Times Book Fair, Anne Carroll Moore of the New York Public Library, wrote of the presentation of Master Skylark as the "most interesting feature I have seen in the auditorium. It had a real sense of drama, rather than a piece of book service. The manipulation was carried on with great care, and the audience gave double attention, it seemed to me. I would rate Master Skylark as the best of anything I have seen there before."

Says U. S. Strength Must Remain Firm

Attorney Sherwood E. Davis of Kingston, addressing members of Local 417, Ironworkers Union, at their regular monthly meeting in Newburgh Friday night, said the United States' armed strength at home and abroad must remain at a high level for many years because of the "irreconcilable differences between the political philosophies of the U. S. and Russia."

"That is the only way at the present time to minimize the possibility of armed conflict," he said.

Davis urged that a strong international policy be adopted to make the peoples of the world recognize "our friendship and sincerity." Such a policy, he said, "is vital to our future security."

In closing, Davis asked the cooperation of those union members from Kingston and Ulster county to volunteer their services in carrying out Civil Defense responsibility.

Davis is director of civil defense for the city of Kingston.

Hope Held to Avert Coal Strike Monday

Washington, Sept. 20 (AP)—John L. Lewis' contract with northern soft coal mines expires at midnight tonight but there was still hope a strike due Monday could be averted.

Many of the strike-threatened mines planned to keep operating today, some paying overtime wages to get an extra day's production before a strike could develop.

A number of industry and government sources said Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers Union, and Harry Moses, president of the northern owner group known as the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, actually were close to reaching agreement on contract terms.

But they apparently had been close before, when Lewis earlier this week told reporters he and Moses had reached an understanding. Moses denied it.

An agreement would probably be in the neighborhood of a $1.80 a day for the 200,000 soft coal miners employed by the Moses group of owners, plus a 10-cent-a-ton boost in the welfare fund royalty. The basic daily pay now is $16.35 and the royalty 30 cents a ton.

Those familiar with the industry's labor relations were confident that once terms with Moses are agreed upon, the same terms would be pressed on the rest of the industry.

Youth Is Given 30 Days for Assault

A teen-age youth was sentenced to 30 days in the Ulster County Jail this morning in city court on a charge of assault third degree and a second defendant pleaded guilty to a charge of reckless driving and was fined $50.

Marvin Krom, 19, of 238 Albany avenue, was arrested about 4:30 a. m. Saturday, Sept. 13, by Mrs. Mildred VanKleeck of 146 Main street on the assault charge. Miss Adelaide VanKleeck told police that Krom had come to the house in a cab and had "grabbed her mother by the throat."

Attorney Francis Martocci represented the defendant and Attorney John Larkin appeared for the district attorney.

Fred Schryver of Smith avenue, who was arrested March 24 on a charge of driving while intoxicated, was permitted to plead guilty to a charge of reckless driving and was fined $50 by Judge Raymond J. Mino. Attorney Charles Gaffney represented the defendant and Attorney Hubert Richter appeared for the district attorney.

Claims Truck Forced Tractor Off Road

Claiming he had been forced off the road by an unknown truck, Leo Bozydaj, 54, RD Highland, was injured yesterday afternoon when a tractor he was operating went off the road and overturned, pinning the operator to the ground. The tractor is owned by Salvatore Paganello of Brooklyn who owns a summer place at Clintondale.

State police were informed by the caretaker that he had been operating the tractor on South road, Clintondale, when a truck forced him off the road when another truck coming in the opposite direction appeared over a hill. Russell Rhodes, Clintondale, removed the injured man from under the tractor. His injuries were limited to bruises to the right side and he declined medical attention.

Failed to Make Curve

An automobile operated by Peter Rath, 53, of Albany, failed to make a sharp right curve on Route 212 five miles west of Saugerties about 4:30 p. m. Friday and knocked down a mailbox belonging to Richard Barringer, then plunged through a wire and stone fence, state police at the Kingston station reported. No personal injuries were reported.

Charges Hit and Run

Frances Barbara Grafe of Bloomington reported at 5:45 p. m. yesterday that her car was struck and damaged in the Empire Market parking grounds by a vehicle bearing the plate number UL-66-77 NY and that the driver failed to stop.

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

Any Great Play Demands Thought

By OSWALD JACOBY
Written for NEA Service

The man who dives from the top of the Empire State Building into a small barrel of water is always very matter of fact about his feat. "You need only four feet two inches of water," he will say, and he will go on to prove that anybody at all could do it.

The same thing is true of certain high dives at the bridge table. There's always a logical explanation later on, but they still look pretty good. For example, take the beautiful play made recently in a rubber game by Perry L. Ruston.

Ruston opened the king of clubs and was allowed to hold the trick. He continued clubs, and dummy's ace won. Now declarer led a low trump from dummy to the ace of spades in his own hand, and Ruston executed his high dive by dropping the king of spades.

There was a logical explanation, of course. Declarer surely would have tried a finesse if he had held the jack of spades. Since no finesse was anticipated, East must hold the jack of spades.

Opening lead—♣ K

South's bidding indicated that he held only four spades, so East was marked with three trumps. Hence the defenders would still get the same single trump trick whether or not Ruston dropped his king.

The full beauty of the play became apparent later on. East was bound to win his pack of spades in time to lead a heart, and this gave West two heart tricks in addition to the club and the trump. Thus declarer was set one trick.

Now see what happens if West keeps the king of spades when declarer plays the ace of that suit. South leads a second spade, and West must win with the king.

Now, what? If West leads hearts, South's king will win a trick. If West leads anything else, South gets in to draw the last trump. Then South can run the diamonds, discarding one heart from the dummy. Thus only one heart trick is lost, and declarer makes his contract.

City Garage Has Internationals

The City Garage, 154 Cliton avenue, has been appointed dealer for sales, service and parts for International Motor Trucks, it was announced today by Edward H. Franz, proprietor of the garage.

The City Garage, one of Kingston's oldest, was established as a livery stable by the late Nelson R. Smith about 1900. It was acquired by Franz on Oct. 1, 1950. Franz was formerly shop foreman for Bev. Anderson Chevrolet, Inc.; prior to that was service manager for Harco Motors. For more than eight years prior to World War 2, he was connected with Colonial City Chevrolet in this city, leaving in 1941 to become service manager for a Long Island Chevrolet dealer.

Four Rail Workers Held for Looting Mail

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—Four mail handlers charged with looting parcels containing watches and jewelry which, the government contended were worth "thousands of dollars," were held in $5,000 bail each yesterday in Federal Court by U. S. Commissioner Edward Mc Donald.

The four, employed by the New York Central Railroad, had been working at Grand Central Terminal for more than a year, according to Assistant U. S. Attorney Daniel Greenberg. They waived a hearing pending action by a grand jury.

The four were Joseph S. Corcia, 35, of 707 East 179 street, the Bronx; Paul E. Hetherington, 21, of 105 Haven avenue, Robert L. West, 39, of 364 West 121st street, and Ralph M. Pennise, 32, of 100-03 39th avenue, Corona, Queens.

The four, arrested by postal inspectors were charged with mail theft.

Niles Is Serious

Brookline, Mass., Sept. 20 (AP)—David K. Niles, special administrative assistant to Presidents Roosevelt and Truman, is in an "extremely serious" condition at Beth Israel Hospital. A hospital spokesman today said Niles has a "severe abdominal disease." He underwent surgery in July and was readmitted to the hospital a week ago.

Father Is Accused of Beating Infant to Death

Kenneth Mac Lellan, 22-year-old bridge tender, was booked on a homicide charge last night, accused of killing Joseph William Muth, 2½.

Assistant District Attorney Vincent Dermody said Mac Lellan, who sleeps in the daytime because he works nights, had tied the child to his wrist with a string but the boy got loose and mussed the apartment.

Then, Dermody said, the 195-pound father awoke and gave the tot a beating that killed him.

Pictures Worry Him

Newark, N. J., Sept. 20 (AP)—Seaman First Class James C. Yates has lost his wallet but he's worried about pictures of a pretty girl that were in it, not the money. The wallet contained $193 but after he lost it yesterday here, Yates said he was offering reward for return of the snapshops and identification papers. Yates, who lives in Panama City, Fla., and is on leave from Norfolk, Va., explained the girl subject of the snaps, taken in a bathing suit, "would murder me if she knew I lost her pictures."

Thunderjet Explodes

Tokyo, Sept. 20 (AP)—A U. S. F-84 Thunderjet on a test flight exploded over Fukuoka in southern Japan, killing the pilot and a Japanese civilian. The U. S. Air Force withheld the name of the pilot. Wreckage of the plane was scattered over a wide area in the city. It knocked out communications and destroyed a building, killing a Japanese civilian inside.

Methodists Appropriate Half Million to Build

Ocean City, N. J., Sept 20 (AP)—A fund of half a million dollars was voted yesterday by the New Jersey Methodist Conference for new churches and expansion of church services.

The fund is to be spent during the next four years. A minimum of $200,000 will be used to construct new churches in suburban and industrial areas which now have inadequate religious facilities, the Rev. W. Neal Raver, superintendent of the Bridgeton district, said.

Other parts of the appropriation will be spent on the ministers' retirement fund, improvement of church institutions, expansion of church work in Puerto Rico, and of activities for laymen and an increased program of evangelism.

The man who dives from the top of the Empire State Building into a small barrel of water is always very matter of fact about his feat. "You need only four feet two inches of water," he will say, and he will go on to prove that anybody at all could do it.

The same thing is true of certain high dives at the bridge table. There's always a logical explanation later on, but they still look pretty good. For example, take the beautiful play made recently in a rubber game by Perry L. Ruston.

Ruston opened the king of clubs and was allowed to hold the trick. He continued clubs, and dummy's ace won. Now declarer led a low trump from dummy to the ace of spades in his own hand, and Ruston executed his high dive by dropping the king of spades.

There was a logical explanation, of course. Declarer surely would have tried a finesse if he had held the jack of spades. Since no finesse was anticipated, East must hold the jack of spades.

South's bidding indicated that he held only four spades, so East was marked with three trumps. Hence the defenders would still get the same single trump trick whether or not Ruston dropped his king.

The full beauty of the play became apparent later on. East was bound to win his pack of spades in time to lead a heart, and this gave West two heart tricks in addition to the club and the trump. Thus declarer was set one trick.

Now see what happens if West keeps the king of spades when declarer plays the ace of that suit. South leads a second spade, and West must win with the king.

Now, what? If West leads hearts, South's king will win a trick. If West leads anything else, South gets in to draw the last trump. Then South can run the diamonds, discarding one heart from the dummy. Thus only one heart trick is lost, and declarer makes his contract.

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—Four mail handlers charged with looting parcels containing watches and jewelry which, the government contended were worth "thousands of dollars," were held in $5,000 bail each yesterday in Federal Court by U. S. Commissioner Edward Mc Donald.

The four, employed by the New York Central Railroad, had been working at Grand Central Terminal for more than a year, according to Assistant U. S. Attorney Daniel Greenberg. They waived a hearing pending action by a grand jury.

The four were Joseph S. Corcia, 35, of 707 East 179 street, the Bronx; Paul E. Hetherington, 21, of 105 Haven avenue, Robert L. West, 39, of 364 West 121st street, and Ralph M. Pennise, 32, of 100-03 39th avenue, Corona, Queens.

Father Is Accused of Beating Infant to Death

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—A young father is accused of beating his infant stepson to death yesterday because the toddler had acted impishly.

Kenneth Mac Lellan, 22-year-old bridge tender, was booked on a homicide charge last night, accused of killing Joseph William Muth, 2½.

Assistant District Attorney Vincent Dermody said Mac Lellan, who sleeps in the daytime because he works nights, had tied the child to his wrist with a string but the boy got loose and mussed the apartment.

Then, Dermody said, the 195-pound father awoke and gave the tot a beating that killed him.

Mac Lellan and his 28-year-old wife, Marie, also have a year-and-a-half-old boy of their own.

Newark, N. J., Sept. 20 (AP)—Seaman First Class James C. Yates has lost his wallet but he's worried about pictures of a pretty girl that were in it, not the money. The wallet contained $193 but after he lost it yesterday here, Yates said he was offering reward for return of the snapshops and identification papers. Yates, who lives in Panama City, Fla., and is on leave from Norfolk, Va., explained the girl subject of the snaps, taken in a bathing suit, "would murder me if she knew I lost her pictures."

Methodists Appropriate Half Million to Build

Ocean City, N. J., Sept 20 (AP)—A fund of half a million dollars was voted yesterday by the New Jersey Methodist Conference for new churches and expansion of church services.

The fund is to be spent during the next four years. A minimum of $200,000 will be used to construct new churches in suburban and industrial areas which now have inadequate religious facilities, the Rev. W. Neal Raver, superintendent of the Bridgeton district, said.

Other parts of the appropriation will be spent on the ministers' retirement fund, improvement of church institutions, expansion of church work in Puerto Rico, and of activities for laymen and an increased program of evangelism.

Says 'Moscow Molly' Knows Port Doings

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 20 (AP)—A broadcasting "Moscow Molly" has been urging U. S. airmen in Greenland to go home and get warm, a Rochester mother reports.

Mrs. Mildred Agness said yesterday that her son, Pfc. Robert Agness, had told her 10 months ago about Russian propaganda broadcasts at the Thule air force base under construction in Greenland. The mother said she kept quiet about the story until learning that the government this week disclosed details of the project.

"Robert told me Moscow Molly used to broadcast the times of arrivals of planes flying in, and tell them who was aboard and what their business was," Mrs. Agness said.

Once, the Red broadcast informed the base that a runway light was out, and check showed that it was, the mother said her son reported. He was home on leave from Greenland last November.

Have 'Influence' Notes

Washington, Sept. 20 (AP)—House investigators of the Justice Department today had before them testimony citing chapter and verse of instances in which congressmen used influence in tax cases. T. Lamar Caudle, former head of the criminal and tax divisions, did not imply anything was wrong about what the lawmakers did. But he told of cases in which senators and representatives used whatever influence they commanded to get hearings or conferences for friends and clients. Some went a bit further, he testified.

Boulware claimed his car went out of control.

The Communists came here yesterday to hand over proposals on the unification of Germany to the West German Parliament. Richard C. Hottelet, correspondent for the Columbia Broadcasting System and president of FPA said: "This is our customary way of talking with people of news interest. The membership is in agreement on this."

Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 20 (AP)—City police today reported recovery of a second empty jewel case, which was believed to have figured in a $60,000 theft of diamond rings from a New York jewelry salesman. Police speculated the two empty cases were tossed from the bridge.

This is the second British ship seized by the Nationalists while plying between Communist Chinese ports.

Would Have War Anyhow

Quantico, Va., Sept. 20 (AP)—Gov. Adlai Stevenson said today that war might conceivably have been avoided in Korea but fighting would have burst out somewhere else "so long as the Soviet Union pressed its purpose to subjugate the free peoples of the earth." He came to Quantico to address marines who are receiving commissions at the marine corps base here. Among them was one of his three sons, Adlai III.

Ask Prayers for Unity

Boston, Sept. 20 (AP)—The Protestant Episcopal Church ended its 12 day triennial convention yesterday with a plea that members pray for unity "both in the divided world and in the divided church." A pastoral letter from the bishops of the church called for support of the United Nations Organization and expressed hope that it may develop into "a world federation open to all peoples, and capable of maintaining the peace." The bishops' letter, traditional conclusion of the convention, highlighted yesterday's session which approved a record annual budget of $5,924,043 to carry out the church's program for the next three years.

Camphor Production

Tokyo (AP) — Japan soon will start mass production of synthetic camphor from natural resin under a recently discovered process. SHOKAN

Shokan, Sept. 20—Elder Arnold H. Bellows, pastor of the Olive and Hurley Old School Baptist Church here has received and accepted a call from the Baltimore, Md., church to preach there one Sunday in each month.

Evelyn Valland of New York is spending some time with her brother, John, at the family summer home, the one time Augustus Greene place.

Attendance at the five sessions of the O.S. Baptist two-day meeting Wednesday and Thursday averaged close to 100 persons. The evening service Wednesday, at which the historic meetinghouse was illuminated by a score of coal oil bracket lamps, was reminiscent of the "early candlelight" services of many generations ago. Everyone was glad to welcome Elder John Ruston, of Dutton, Canada, who has been preaching here upon occasion for nearly 40 years. Most of the visiting Baptists were quartered at the Leonard Ruckert place where Mr. and Mrs. Ruckert, assisted by Mrs. John Heiser and Mrs. Martin Gulnack, supplied meals for some 85 persons.

Harrison Gridley of Shady and Mildred McLoughlin of Olive Bridge, who taught the Ashokan school last year, are numbered among the several teachers retained for service at the big Onteora Central schoolhouse, where the fall term is now in full swing despite the fact that considerable work remains to be done on the gymnasium, cafeteria and high school units. Topsoil is being applied to the 30 acres of grounds surrounding this outstanding educational center at Boiceville, three miles west of Shokan.

May Allen Roche of Brooklyn is sojourning at the Allen place on the old state road.

Mrs. Charles Constable returned to Phoenicia Wednesday after visiting Mrs. Joseph Constable and attending the Wells-Carlzon nuptials in the Olive Bridge Church Sunday.

each attack, the Communists used two companies.

The air force said UN Thunderjets destroyed 19 buildings of a troop concentration south of Sinchon and 10 buildings west of Haeju, both in western Korea.

Tank-supported Chinese won control of Old Baldy's crest Friday

An Eighth Army staff officer said sketchy front reports that the Communists controlled the crest of Old Baldy didn't necessarily mean they were atop it.

But UN soldiers have pulled out prefabricated bunkers on the crest and dug in on the eastern and western slopes. The Chinese are on the north side of the hill and allied tanks cover the southern approach.

Infantry fighting for the Old Baldy dwindled Friday night, but artillery, motar and tank fire from both sides was heavy.

The air force said one B-29 Superfort failed to return from the big Sept. 12-13 strike against the Reds' Suiho power plant on the Yalu river. It was not confirmed whether it went down in enemy territory, the air force said.

The air force reported nine other allied planes lost during the week ended Friday, including four F-86 Sabre jets—but only one Sabre in aerial combat.

One Sabre was lost to Red ground fire and two others to unexplained causes. The Sabres shot down 16 Communist MIG jets, probably destroyed two and damaged nine during the same period, the air force said. This raised the September MIG toll to 47 destroyed, topping the monthly record of 44 set last August.

Other UN plane losses included one F-84 Thunderjet and two prop-driven planes to ground fire and two other F-84s to unexplained causes.

30 Fall Into River

Wellsville, N. Y., Sept. 20 (AP)—About 30 persons were dumped into the Genesee river last night when the cables supporting a footbridge broke. The bridge, four feet wide and 30 feet long, connected Island Park with Tuller Field. The pedestrians were en route to a high school football game at the field. Seven persons were injured, none seriously.

Ike Says Stevenson

the grounds that he has shadowed Eisenhower's attack on what he calls corruption and special favoritism in Washington under the Truman administration. But it seemingly would be a little late to take such a course, in view of the general's twice repeated confidence in Nixon's integrity.

Makes Pointed Attack

With all of this turmoil boiling around him, Eisenhower delivered before a crowd which overflowed the 10,500 seat municipal auditorium in Kansas City last night the most pointed attack he has made on Stevenson.

The Republican nominee said bluntly that Sevenson has been nominated by the "big city bosses" over Sen. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee.

"I sympathize with the nominee of the Democratic Party because of the company he is obliged to keep," Eisenhower said as the crowd responded with laughter.

"Perhaps he may disown that company altogether. But this is the payoff question: Will the bosses disown him?"

The Republican nominee said flatly that Stevenson is "not one of their own kind" with the bosses he said rule Chicago, New York, Jersey City and Kansas City.

"They are smart enough to know that if he were one of their own kind neither they nor their party would have a chance to win," the general said.

Eisenhower said that "disclosures of graft, dishonesty and inefficiency" had proved to be a disease with the Truman administration. He got a laugh from the obviously Republican crowd when he said that Stevenson's efforts to run on the Democratic record were "like the story of little Liza trying to cross the river on ice." adding:

"She made it but I don't believe the Democratic candidate will."

This departure into the realm of the wisecrack, which he has criticized Stevenson for using in discussing national issues, had been preceded by an easy going television program patterned after the question and answer format used by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York in his successful bid for re-election in 1950.

Chaplin Faces Bar

years ago, but never became a citizen. His name has been associated with leftist causes. In 1944 he was indicted on charges of violating the Mann Act, which forbids transporting a woman across a state line for immoral purposes.

Chaplin, aboard the Queen Elizabeth with his fourth wife and their four children, radioed the Associated Press:

"Through the proper procedure I applied for a re-entry permit which I was given in good faith and which I accepted in good faith. Therefore I assume that the United States government will recognize its validity."

Chaplin's secretary, Harry Crocker, reached by telephone aboard the Queen Elizabeth, said Chaplin definitely intends to return to this country in about six months.

The millionaire comedian's attorney in Los Angeles, Loyd E. Wright, Jr., was bitter. He also mentioned the re-entry permit obtained a month ago, and added:

"If the government wished to stop him in some way, it seems they could have done it then. It seems like a dirty trick to wait until he and his wife and four children . . . are on a boat before beginning such action."

The present Mrs. Chaplin is the former Oona O'Neill, daughter of playwright Eugene O'Neill. She married Chaplin, who gained fame in silent movie days as a wistful tramp, when she was 18 years old, he 54. She and the four children are American citizens.

They are en route to London for the premier of his latest picture, "The Limelight," and planned a six month vacation abroad.

given in New England. He covered a wide range of subjects in his speeches at Hartford, Conn., and Springfield, Mass., and touched more briefly on the same issues as he "klaxon-stopped" his way, by automobile, through portions of the two states.

He ran into rain both days, but the bad weather failed to discourage the crowds. His managers say he has "better than a good chance" of carrying both states.

The Illinois governor plans to spend today in Virginia.

Other Senators Get Outside Money

Washington, Sept. 20 (AP)—Sen. George D. Aiken (R.-Vt.) said today many senators supplement their official incomes with some outside financial help and when all the facts are known, the furor over Sen. Richard Nixon's special expense fund will fade.

Aiken was one of the few senators willing to comment for publication on the disclosure that the Republican vice presidential candidate accepted some $16,000 in expense money from California businessmen over the past two years.

Comments also came from Republican Sens. Hugh Butler of Nebraska and William Knowland of California.

At Omaha, Butler said he knows a "number of senators on both sides who have been helped in the maintenance of their offices and expense accounts." But he emphasized that they "didn't get a penny of such money for pay."

Knowland said in Honolulu he expects the Democrats to make a campaign issue of the fund disclosures—"but I feel it will be overcome." Knowland said the money was not used for Nixon's "personal benefit."

"I know that no senator can maintain a family in Washington and stay in the Senate on his present salary unless he has some outside financial help," Aiken told a reporter.

Democrats are shouting about the Nixon fund, Aiken said, in an effort to offset Republican criticism of corruption in the present Democratic administration.

Says 'Moscow Molly' Knows Port Doings

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 20 (AP)—A broadcasting "Moscow Molly" has been urging U. S. airmen in Greenland to go home and get warm, a Rochester mother reports.

Mrs. Mildred Agness said yesterday that her son, Pfc. Robert Agness, had told her 10 months ago about Russian propaganda broadcasts at the Thule air force base under construction in Greenland. The mother said she kept quiet about the story until learning that the government this week disclosed details of the project.

"Robert told me Moscow Molly used to broadcast the times of arrivals of planes flying in, and tell them who was aboard and what their business was," Mrs. Agness said.

Once, the Red broadcast informed the base that a runway light was out, and check showed that it was, the mother said her son reported. He was home on leave from Greenland last November.

But he told of cases in which senators and representatives used whatever influence they commanded to get hearings or conferences for friends and clients. Some went a bit further, he testified.

SHOKAN

Shokan, Sept. 20—Elder Arnold H. Bellows, pastor of the Olive and Hurley Old School Baptist Church here has received and accepted a call from the Baltimore, Md., church to preach there one Sunday in each month.

Evelyn Valland of New York is spending some time with her brother, John, at the family summer home, the one time Augustus Greene place.

Attendance at the five sessions of the O.S. Baptist two-day meeting Wednesday and Thursday averaged close to 100 persons. The evening service Wednesday, at which the historic meetinghouse was illuminated by a score of coal oil bracket lamps, was reminiscent of the "early candlelight" services of many generations ago. Everyone was glad to welcome Elder John Ruston, of Dutton, Canada, who has been preaching here upon occasion for nearly 40 years. Most of the visiting Baptists were quartered at the Leonard Ruckert place where Mr. and Mrs. Ruckert, assisted by Mrs. John Heiser and Mrs. Martin Gulnack, supplied meals for some 85 persons.

Harrison Gridley of Shady and Mildred McLoughlin of Olive Bridge, who taught the Ashokan school last year, are numbered among the several teachers retained for service at the big Onteora Central schoolhouse, where the fall term is now in full swing despite the fact that considerable work remains to be done on the gymnasium, cafeteria and high school units. Topsoil is being applied to the 30 acres of grounds surrounding this outstanding educational center at Boiceville, three miles west of Shokan.

May Allen Roche of Brooklyn is sojourning at the Allen place on the old state road.

Mrs. Charles Constable returned to Phoenicia Wednesday after visiting Mrs. Joseph Constable and attending the Wells-Carlzon nuptials in the Olive Bridge Church Sunday.

Tank-supported Chinese won control of Old Baldy's crest Friday

An Eighth Army staff officer said sketchy front reports that the Communists controlled the crest of Old Baldy didn't necessarily mean they were atop it.

But UN soldiers have pulled out prefabricated bunkers on the crest and dug in on the eastern and western slopes. The Chinese are on the north side of the hill and allied tanks cover the southern approach.

Infantry fighting for the Old Baldy dwindled Friday night, but artillery, motar and tank fire from both sides was heavy.

The air force said one B-29 Superfort failed to return from the big Sept. 12-13 strike against the Reds' Suiho power plant on the Yalu river. It was not confirmed whether it went down in enemy territory, the air force said.

The Communist radio had claimed three of the big four engine bombers were shot down.

The air force reported nine other allied planes lost during the week ended Friday, including four F-86 Sabre jets—but only one Sabre in aerial combat.

One Sabre was lost to Red ground fire and two others to unexplained causes. The Sabres shot down 16 Communist MIG jets, probably destroyed two and damaged nine during the same period, the air force said. This raised the September MIG toll to 47 destroyed, topping the monthly record of 44 set last August.

Other UN plane losses included one F-84 Thunderjet and two prop-driven planes to ground fire and two other F-84s to unexplained causes.

Schaffer Stores office in Schenectady was closed this morning.

It is understood the company is preparing a news release containing details of its part of the transaction.

Senator Wicks sometime ago made known his intention of selling the Albany avenue residence and in the 1952 edition of Price and Lee Company's Kingston directory the senator's home address is listed as 7 Albany avenue which is the Gov. Clinton Hotel annex. In the same book's numerical street directory the entry for 225 Albany avenue is vacant.

30 Fall Into River

Wellsville, N. Y., Sept. 20 (AP)—About 30 persons were dumped into the Genesee river last night when the cables supporting a footbridge broke. The bridge, four feet wide and 30 feet long, connected Island Park with Tuller Field. The pedestrians were en route to a high school football game at the field. Seven persons were injured, none seriously.

Plane Hits Pole

Paris, Sept. 20 (AP)—A U. S. Air Force DC-3 transport plane crashed in flames today after hitting a telegraph pole as it swooped low to land at Paris' Orly Field. Three crewmen were killed and one seriously injured. Names of the crewmen were withheld pending notification of next of kin.

Ike Says Stevenson

the grounds that he has shadowed Eisenhower's attack on what he calls corruption and special favoritism in Washington under the Truman administration. But it seemingly would be a little late to take such a course, in view of the general's twice repeated confidence in Nixon's integrity.

Makes Pointed Attack

With all of this turmoil boiling around him, Eisenhower delivered before a crowd which overflowed the 10,500 seat municipal auditorium in Kansas City last night the most pointed attack he has made on Stevenson.

The Republican nominee said bluntly that Sevenson has been nominated by the "big city bosses" over Sen. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee.

"I sympathize with the nominee of the Democratic Party because of the company he is obliged to keep," Eisenhower said as the crowd responded with laughter.

"Perhaps he may disown that company altogether. But this is the payoff question: Will the bosses disown him?"

The Republican nominee said flatly that Stevenson is "not one of their own kind" with the bosses he said rule Chicago, New York, Jersey City and Kansas City.

"They are smart enough to know that if he were one of their own kind neither they nor their party would have a chance to win," the general said.

Eisenhower said that "disclosures of graft, dishonesty and inefficiency" had proved to be a disease with the Truman administration. He got a laugh from the obviously Republican crowd when he said that Stevenson's efforts to run on the Democratic record were "like the story of little Liza trying to cross the river on ice." adding:

"She made it but I don't believe the Democratic candidate will."

This departure into the realm of the wisecrack, which he has criticized Stevenson for using in discussing national issues, had been preceded by an easy going television program patterned after the question and answer format used by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York in his successful bid for re-election in 1950.

Chaplin Faces Bar

years ago, but never became a citizen. His name has been associated with leftist causes. In 1944 he was indicted on charges of violating the Mann Act, which forbids transporting a woman across a state line for immoral purposes.

Chaplin, aboard the Queen Elizabeth with his fourth wife and their four children, radioed the Associated Press:

"Through the proper procedure I applied for a re-entry permit which I was given in good faith and which I accepted in good faith. Therefore I assume that the United States government will recognize its validity."

Chaplin's secretary, Harry Crocker, reached by telephone aboard the Queen Elizabeth, said Chaplin definitely intends to return to this country in about six months.

The millionaire comedian's attorney in Los Angeles, Loyd E. Wright, Jr., was bitter. He also mentioned the re-entry permit obtained a month ago, and added:

"If the government wished to stop him in some way, it seems they could have done it then. It seems like a dirty trick to wait until he and his wife and four children . . . are on a boat before beginning such action."

The present Mrs. Chaplin is the former Oona O'Neill, daughter of playwright Eugene O'Neill. She married Chaplin, who gained fame in silent movie days as a wistful tramp, when she was 18 years old, he 54. She and the four children are American citizens.

They are en route to London for the premier of his latest picture, "The Limelight," and planned a six month vacation abroad.

Adlai Would Hold

given in New England. He covered a wide range of subjects in his speeches at Hartford, Conn., and Springfield, Mass., and touched more briefly on the same issues as he "klaxon-stopped" his way, by automobile, through portions of the two states.

He ran into rain both days, but the bad weather failed to discourage the crowds. His managers say he has "better than a good chance" of carrying both states.

Other Senators Get Outside Money

Washington, Sept. 20 (AP)—Sen. George D. Aiken (R.-Vt.) said today many senators supplement their official incomes with some outside financial help and when all the facts are known, the furor over Sen. Richard Nixon's special expense fund will fade.

Aiken was one of the few senators willing to comment for publication on the disclosure that the Republican vice presidential candidate accepted some $16,000 in expense money from California businessmen over the past two years.

Comments also came from Republican Sens. Hugh Butler of Nebraska and William Knowland of California.

At Omaha, Butler said he knows a "number of senators on both sides who have been helped in the maintenance of their offices and expense accounts." But he emphasized that they "didn't get a penny of such money for pay."

Knowland said in Honolulu he expects the Democrats to make a campaign issue of the fund disclosures—"but I feel it will be overcome." Knowland said the money was not used for Nixon's "personal benefit."

"I know that no senator can maintain a family in Washington and stay in the Senate on his present salary unless he has some outside financial help," Aiken told a reporter.

Democrats are shouting about the Nixon fund, Aiken said, in an effort to offset Republican criticism of corruption in the present Democratic administration.

5. DOES THE COMPANY PROVIDE LIABILITY AND COMPENSATION INSURANCE TO PROTECT ME IN case of accident?
6. DO I KNOW THE BRAND GRADE OR QUALITY OF MATERIAL I am getting?
7. IN THE EVENT I PAY FOR THE JOB ON AN INSTALLMENT BASIS, do I know what finance company will have my note?
